The story is a work of fiction, a projection of what is possible based on current political and violent events. The characters may seem like real people, but they are obviously false names and inaccurate descriptions with only one name of an actual living person from the journalism world. Any similarity or reflection of living people is, well, you know, coincidental. If you read this story and think it's a negative reflection of you, you are either too sensitive, paranoid, or guilty of something you would prefer to keep secret.

Specifics of battles, tactics, blood, and guts descriptions and outcomes are intentionally left out of this story. The last thing I want to do is to present ideas, recommendations, “how to” on military tactics to people that wish to use them against Law Enforcement, the military, the public and government. There are too many wannabe grunts, lifeguards, green beanies, jarheads, generals, video game warriors within the ranks of the anti-American, progressive-socialist, ANTIFA, and other persons with anti-American intents.

Prologue

The Second Civil War did not begin with soldiers. It began with numbers, district maps, and revenge.

In the final two years of President Joseph Barett's term, Democratic strategists in Washington and allied governors across several states embarked on a demographic campaign unprecedented in American history. Officially, it was humanitarian, "a commitment to openness." Unofficially, as later congressional hearings revealed, it was designed to reshape the electorate before the 2030 Census.

Internal party analyses projected that if enough migrants—documented or not—were counted as residents, Democratic-leaning states could gain as many as thirty additional congressional seats and dozens of electoral votes. The assumption, voiced by a senior campaign consultant in a leaked memo, was blunt:

> "Demographics are destiny. Secure the count, and the count secures control."

Rita's Journals

The history of the Second Civil War outlined here is built directly on the journals and scrap notes written by Dr. Rita Talib while she experienced the war. She had recently completed her graduate degree before the war officially began. Although she managed to submit for acceptance to a PhD program, the War made taking and completing course work and dissertation a far lengthier process than is normal. However, she used the events of the time as an opportunity to make a real time record of what was happening to the country.

Rita Talib, a 27-year-old second-generation Indian American, records the events of the Second Civil War from a Social-Political perspective. Thus, according to her original objective of her writings at the time of these events, this book will, hopefully, provide readers, researchers, and educators with a non-combat vision of what really happened and why. As most readers know, Rita Talib eventually earned her Doctor of Philosophy, Political Science, and her writings, research, analytical methods, and conclusions continue to set the standards for studies in Social-Political Science.

Dr. Talib did not begin her recording of the war from the initial actions that led to its start; those actions and the actors involved were not fully recognized and understood at that moment. It was all viewed as more noise, telecommunication noise, rumors, fake news broadcasts, dramatizations, YouTube content for "likes," "shares," and subscribers." Her journal and notes begin when she and a relative handful of US citizens realized the potential inevitability of an internal war. No one could imagine, no one was willing to accept that what we were all seeing on television and social media spelled the opening salvos of a Second Civil War.

As you read this book, quotes from Rita's journals, writings, and notes are shown in italics and indented to the right on these pages.

Chapter One: Seeds of Retaliation: The Politics of Demography

When Republican Stephani Barker won in 2024 with 52 percent of the popular vote, 65 percent of the Electoral College, and every swing state, Democrats' vision collapsed overnight. Within progressive circles, disbelief curdled into fury. For Barker Stephani and Republicans, this was a mandate from the moral majority. To Democrats, especially Progressives, Barker's victory was not democracy; it was heresy. News anchors referred to her supporters as "reactionary extremists." At the same time, late-night hosts joked that the new president's followers were "the new Confederacy," unaware of the irony that the label would soon reverse itself in the nation's vocabulary. As you read through this author's research based on Rita's journals and lectures, the Democrat Party proved once and for all, they did not accept democratic elections, at least not as Progressives Socialists in the party were willing to do anything to take power, … even war.

Barker's first acts targeted what she called "restoration of lawful order": re-enforcing deportation rulings ignored under the previous administration, reinstating border wall construction, and canceling hundreds of billions in climate and social equity grants. Each measure was lawful under the Constitution. Each was portrayed in the press as an authoritarian assault.

The majority of voters wanted the removal of illegal immigrants, especially the estimated 14,000 convicted illegal immigrants and those who were charged with crimes when caught in the act, or significant evidence already existed to confirm their guilt. The previous president's administration opened the nation's border, allowing over 11,000,000 illegal immigrants to cross the border and then provided transportation for these people to go to the city of their choice, where they were to receive free housing, free food, and free cash or debit cards at taxpayer expense. Many of the illegals were members of MS-13 crime gang, TREN DE ARAGUA crime gang, and Cartels from Mexico and Venezuela, all were well known for trafficking drugs, humans, weapons, and sex, including pedophiles. The flood of illegals did not just come from Mexico, Central and South America, they came from all over the world, 140 different countries flooded the border, and no city or state had the resources to provide the funding for the human flood. Democrats, especially Progressives, fully knew that taxpayers were expected to foot the bill.

The number of illegals committing crimes beyond entering the country illegally grew exponentially. Hundreds of murders, assaults, rapes, child trafficking, pedophilia cases, car jackings, home invasions flooded police stations across the country. States and cities declaring themselves as "Sanctuary Cities" hid many of the crimes from the state and national crime statistics by relabeling or reducing serious crimes to lower-level crimes, or worse, chose to not record, investigate and prosecute criminals.

The major news media and the Democratic Party played down the crime increase, or would disavow it and accuse anyone, especially a Republican, of being racist for mentioning it.

Social media did not allow crimes to go unseen. Nearly everyone carries a cellphone with a camera. Home security cameras, business security cameras and smartphone photos and videos of crime as thew were committed or afterwards flooded the internet faster than law enforcement could respond. The crimes could not be hidden since videos of robberies, assaults, and shootings were posted daily online. Still, even those people posting the evidence of crime rejected the notion that illegals should be arrested and prosecuted; instead, they managed to blame Republicans for the existence of poverty, and the only reason people commit crimes is due to poverty and mental health.

During the Barrett's Administration, the Democrats' Border Policy became one of ending real law enforcement and putting an end to the US as an independent nation. Progressives were growing in influence, and they wanted an end to the national identity. They wanted to adopt a one-world society view. This is the view still held by one of the most significant campaign contributors to the Democratic Party, George Zoros and Family.

At the time, it hadn't been proven yet, but since 2026, the evidence was a certainty. Iran, Hezbollah, China's Ministry of Security, Cartels and other special interest groups were funding most of the Liberal candidates and politicians through proxy accounts and proxy organizations: Peoples' Forum, Center for American Progress and its originator, the Open Society Foundation. In many cases, it was found that donations were being sent to candidates from nonexistent or illegal immigrants (completely unaware that their names and addresses were used). It became one of the most significant political scandals in over 200 years.

Rita Talib records that:

> The political scandal did not impede the Democrat Party since they controlled the major media and the major media spun the news as a work of fiction concocted by the President Barker to sew doubt in the voters and deflect the public from seeing the dictatorship and undemocratic tactics she was using as she militarizes the nation guarantying her the monarchy of the US as it's Queen forever. As I write this now, and as time progresses, I am amazed at how skilled and manipulative the Democrat Party and the News Media were during those days. The ability to spread a false story with the aid of the most ubiquitous media resources to hide or impede the facts is frightening.

Journal 2, page 5

By June 2025, protests filled the streets of Los Angeles, Chicago, Portland, and New York. Governors in several Democratic-led states instructed police to stand down rather than cooperate with federal enforcement. Cable outlets aired 24-hour footage of confrontations, always edited to suggest government brutality, rarely showing the mobs throwing bricks, Molotov cocktails, or laser pointers at pilots' eyes.

Reminder, as stated in the Prologue, quoted sections from Rita's records of the war, indented and in italics.

The last thing I and every young American should have expected was to experience a war on our own soil. Hearing the stories of my father, an Army retired military police officer, and my mother, a retired Army Nurse, relaying their experiences during the Afghanistan War, still did not prepare my siblings and me for what we were to experience in OUR AMERICA.

Within academic circles, a new phrase spread: "Electoral Nullification." Its meaning was chilling—if elections yielded the "wrong" result, their outcome must be resisted until reversed. That idea, repeated often enough, became a moral justification for insurrection.

Rita quotes a retired US Army Intelligence Officer she met through her dad's connections and interviewed in 2036:

> "It was the same playbook we used abroad—psychological operations, rumor amplification, street optics. Only this time the target was us." [Major Percie Daron, Retired, US Army, interviewed April 12, 2036]

By spring of 2026, major newspapers published opinion columns arguing that democracy could no longer protect democracy, that "extra-constitutional measures" might be required to "reset" the republic. Within months, militant groups had taken those editorials literally.

In Nashville, Rita writes how she felt the tremors through her own neighborhood. Food prices soared after coordinated cyber-attacks on trucking logistics hubs. Power outages rolled through the South. Her mother's old military hospital at Fort Campbell opened its trauma wing for domestic-casualty overflow from civilian hospitals in southern Kentucky and Middle Tennessee. The local news that once covered the weather, music concerts, festivals, sports events, and traffic, now issues evacuation advisories.

Did the war begin over illegal immigration, fearmongering, accusations of racism, bigotry, economics, medical care, or the influence Barker had with most of the production businesses? Or, was this a war brought about because the Democrat Party did not have a policy platform that stood out as in the best interest of the American People? Before President Joseph Barett's (Democrat) administration (preceded by President Barker's first term), Barett's predecessors (President's Klinton and Obam) were the party of "no or limited immigration" and approved mass deportations. Before Joseph Barett and Barnie Obam, it was the Democrat Klinton, who sought to balance the National Budget and avoid wasting taxpayer money. They also wanted to keep taxpayer funds in the US as much as possible, reserving them for foreign projects that benefit American citizens and national security. All these things were set aside by President Barett and adopted by Republican Barker.

Was this entire nightmare created by the Democrat Party that lost its individuality, having nothing to offer the voters except an un-American platform promoting a Socialist-Marxist future? After all, the most vocal politicians during Joseph Barett's term and through the end of the Second Civil War were the Progressive members of the Democrat Party, all of whom presented a mix of Socialist, Communist, and Marxist policies that have failed over and over again throughout history. If so, who do we really place the blame and responsibility on for the millions of deaths and many millions of wounded and scared citizens of this injured nation?

> From a historian compare and contrast perspective, as we look back at the photos and articles about these four Presidents, it's interesting to see how close Klinton, Obam, and Barker were before Barker decided to run for office and how her policies were a closer match to the old Democrat Party and Joseph Barett's Democrat policies were more in tune with the Republican Party policies of the early industrial era from the 1880 through 1945.
> [Final Draft of Rita's "Introduction" to her graduate thesis on the Second Civil War]

The Seeds of Retaliation had sprouted. The Social-Political historian in Rita marks this moment as the first tipping point—when a disappointed political class transformed policy loss into personal vendetta, and when vengeance masqueraded as virtue. From that soil grew the battle lines that would divide the nation for eleven years.

Chapter Two: The Fall of Civility (2025–2026)

The Spark

History rarely announces its turning points; they arrive disguised as headlines.

On March 9, 2026, a small convoy carrying Senator Elias Ward of Missouri was ambushed on his way to a veterans' conference in St. Louis. Ward, a mild-mannered constitutional scholar who had served for decades with little fanfare, was shot three times in the chest by a lone gunman later identified as Jason Kurran, a twenty-four-year-old self-styled "anti-fascist revolutionary."

The senator's death lasted less than thirty seconds on the ground — but it detonated the next decade.

BREAKING NEWS:

"Missouri Senator Elias Ward, long known for his conservative interpretation of constitutional law, has been shot outside Jefferson Memorial Hall. Sources claim the attack may be politically motivated." [CNN ALERT – 3:17 p.m. CST]

CNN Senior Journalist, Charles Spritz, stated on the air, "Senator Ward's divisive interpretation of the First and Second Amendment is what got him killed. His public comments were a threat to the freedom and safety of Black and Brown people. I'm not surprised by his death; I'm just surprised it took this long." [CNN, 6 PM ET]

By nightfall, speculation outran facts. Nearly every major media network, including ABC, CBS, NBC, CNN, and MSNBC, claimed Ward was killed by a "white nationalist protester angry over immigration policy." This, of course, made no sense since the Senator was a staunch anti-illegal immigration and a pro-deportation Republican. Almost in concert or coordination with other deflecting news reports, some of these same media outlets vehemently insisted that Ward was assassinated by "a pro-Conservative Christian extremist seeking to martyr him." Only local police reports, buried under hours of partisan commentary, revealed that Kurran's social-media pages were filled with calls to "punish the traitors in red," "Red and Dead," "Conservatives are racists," "Republican Nazis," "Hitler Ward" and "Adolf Barker," plus he had photos of Molotov cocktails captioned "Justice burns hotter than law."

Not one single major news service or Democrat politician reported corrections to their initial versions of the news. Instead, they spun versions of the news that emphasized that the fault lies with Stephani Barker. Her policies caused this to happen. The police are only reporting what the Conservatives tell them to say; it's all fake evidence.

Within twenty-four hours, riots flared in Portland, Chicago, and Los Angeles that made past protests of ICS and BLM riots look tame in comparison. The same media services that blamed for the murder of a US Senator on himself and the US President, reported that the protests are "mostly peaceful" despite the massively destructive riots shown on camera and video, violence that resulted in the murders of several police officers, store owners, and employees over the three reported riots.

The protestors, far left-leaning college and high school students, ANTIFA, anti-capitalists, pro-Socialists, and senior citizens, the left-over flower children of the 1960s, along with their now middle-aged offspring, rallied to the streets in several major cities with mass-produced posters reading –

"No Justice, No Peace," "No Monarchs," "Next is Queen Barker,"

Many other calls for violence or actions against the presidential administration and the majority Republican Congress.

By nightfall, protesters held candles and flashlights; by midnight, the candles were used to light fires and firebombs hurled at police lines and into stores. In cities where mayors had already ordered law enforcement to "de-escalate by withdrawal," the withdrawal became surrender.

Rita writes:

> "The first flames of civil war did not come from soldiers. They came from young men and women holding phones, live-streaming themselves burning the country they claimed to save."
> [Rita's "Introduction" to her graduate thesis on the Second Civil War]

Weaponization of Information

The Ward assassination became the first major case study in what scholars now call information-driven polarization. The speed with which falsehoods circulated exceeded the government's ability to correct them. By the time forensic labs confirmed Kurran's motives, half the nation already believed an alternate story.

OP-ED: National Times, March 15, 2026

"Who killed Senator Ward? Ask yourself who benefits. The far right wants a martyr; the far left needs a pretext. Either way, truth has fled the Republic."

Social media platforms became proxy battlefields. Hashtags multiplied faster than bullets:

#WardWasWarningUs, #WardTheMartyr, #JusticeForKurran, #NoUnionNoPeace.

By April, state governors were openly contradicting federal law on live television. One, interviewed by Lyle Kincaid, declared:

"The President can order, but our state will choose what laws to obey."

Kincaid smiled for the camera, his ratings doubling that week.

Rita, writing retrospectively in Nashville, notes:

> "It was not disobedience that killed our democracy—it was televised defiance, turned into entertainment. When rebellion becomes a talk-show segment, war is already rehearsing its lines."
> Rita's Journal 1, page 28

During Stafanie Barker's previous term as President, she was ridiculed by the media and the opposition party for making the very point that information and the press were being weaponized by whoever controls the medium used for transmitting the story. The News Media and social media CEOs understood she was referring to their reporting, and, in the case of social media and internet search tools, the weapon was coding and algorithms. Her habit of bringing this problem up in public was often seen as a threat to those same organizations and corporations. Everyone, if they were honest, knew what she said was true; however, what is true isn't as profitable as what is entertaining.

Two Years of Riots

From the summer of 2025 through the spring of 2026, protests and riots escalated into a clearly recognizable insurgency. Cities that had once prided themselves on tolerance became laboratories for anarchy. In Portland, masked cells attacked Immigration Control offices; in Memphis, gangs looted freight depots; in New York, coordinated groups blocked tunnels and bridges for hours at a time. When federal law enforcement intervened, mayors accused the government of "occupation."

No Queens Day, anti-Democracy and anti-Capitalism organizations with foreign connections, take advantage of the growing unrest by the Democrat Party's acolytes and, sadly, the small percentage of extraordinarily gullible followers that are hypnotized by fake news, political smear campaigns, outlandish claims based on fear mongering, race grifting, opportunists. The first No Queens Day had a moderate amount of success for the anti-America forces.

The second No Queens Day improved on the last by recruiting the News Media to advertise the day, times and locations for Rise & Resist. Without even realizing it, or not wanting to know, Democrats convinced themselves that they were fighting a monarch; however, they were, in fact, aiding a subversive Socialist-Marxists movement that strives to terminate all current political parties, replacing them with the one single Peoples Party exactly as exists in China, North Korea, and more in line with the former Union Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR). As is with call crumbling Democracies, other opportunist organizations wanted a piece of the dead USA pie as will be seen as the record of the Second Civil War progresses.

At no time since the First American Civil War has a political party protested against a democratically elected President, rejected the Will of the Majority, to the extent that they were willing to kill the perceived opposition instead of open debate and function within the confines of the US Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Democrats, as they did in 1861 to keep their slaves, now want to keep their illegal immigrants and criminals. wanted a war with the Republicans, the same Republicans that fought to end slavery and preserve the Nation.

Each time President Barker (and later President Singer) deployed the National Guard (NG) to cities where violence exceeded the abilities of the local law enforcement to control, Portland, Oakland, San Fransico, Los Angelos, Chicago and Memphis sought out local Liberal Judges to issue a "Stay of Execution" giving city and State political leaders something to flex their muscles on, implying that they are more powerful than the US President, then claim to be acting on behalf of the public. However, many citizens of those cities and towns sought help from the NG and expressed gratitude for making their streets safer. Local media televised hundreds of interviews of citizens stating that they wished to help, while the National Media seemed not to show one of these interviews; only the anti-Barker, anti-Law Enforcement, and anti-NG interviews were being broadcast at the time.

NBC EVENING NEWS – July 3, 2026

"Federal troops deployed to assist local and State police in Los Angeles after violent protests engulfed downtown. What Liberals and the News Media continue to call a "mostly peaceful" protest, turned into an attempt to take over the city by these new Democrat Socialists, this neo-Confederate Army.

Local Government and the State refused to call in the National Guard for assistance because they did not like optics and did not want to appear to be using significant force against their predominant voter base.

Anti-Barker supporters and critics of the last Presidential election call it martial law; supporters, business owners, and the public say it's long overdue."

The Administration of President Stephani J. Barker held the line. Her televised address that July was measured, almost maternal:

"Law is not oppression. Order is not tyranny. When elected leaders refuse to enforce the law, they abandon their people to chaos."

The reaction was instantaneous protests in all fifty states. Teachers' unions announced strikes; universities shut down for "solidarity weeks"; Hollywood released a wave of political satires mocking the administration as fascist. The line between civic dissent and sedition blurred.

Rita describes those months as the moment,

> ". . . civilization itself seemed to forget its manners. Social media posts by anti-Barker and anti-capitalism fans cheered as buildings burned and people were beaten. In some cases, these, once peaceful protesters, participated in the beatings and killing of bystanders, posted images and videos of themselves standing over the victims of their violence."

Political Revenge Becomes Creed

To the historian, ideology explains motives; to the citizen, revenge explains everything.

The Democrat Party never got over its election defeat to Stephani Barker. The Democrat Party Leadership was not unified, not "on the same page." As mentioned, several times earlier (and it will be repeated several times in this study), the Democrat Party split into multiple factions, all having differing priorities and governing philosophies. Some of these policies and goals were utterly contrary to the founding principles of the nation's origins.

Progressive Democrats wanted to establish free services for all citizens, paid for by the middle class, upper class, and the wealthy.

Socialists sought to require all personal property to be handed over to the Federal Government, with a communal committee within the federal government determining who would live in which house, who would receive what pay, and who would be allocated which car, thereby implementing a pure communist policy that would end capitalism and entrepreneurship. The Marxists wanted a society governed by a combination of Socialist and Communist practices by a selected committee that rules and mutually decides on who remains or is removed from the ruling committee. In all cases, these self-identifying Progressives terminate the US Constitution and the Bill of Rights to be replaced by a new set of governing principles with no irrevocable Rights.

Independent journalists were the only form of reporters brave enough, or crazy enough, to step into the fray of violence and try to ask the Confederates as to what they were doing and why. When asked individually by journalists, do they know what Fascism is, or Socialism, or Marxism, or Communism is, nearly all could not answer the questions without sticking to a playbook of responses given to the participants by protest and riot organizers. Some responses were worse: "I'm Bored," "I'm getting paid to do this and it's better than a real job"; some of the much older participants answered by referring back to their youth when they protested the Vietnam War and the US Government and wanted to set up a Socialist society during the 1960s and 1970s.

What 2025 and 2026, Barker's First Two Years Told Us.

One thing that became obvious in studying the aftermath of the election defeat, losing the popular vote, the electoral defeat, and losing every swing state, from the outsider view, Democrats and their staunch followers appear to have chosen chaos as the framing for their resistance. Every failure of governance became proof that the Republican government was illegitimate. Every peace agreement success was framed as the President ignoring the national turmoil. Every economic success was framed as neglecting the poor and lacking healthcare. Every increase in jobs was framed as a rejection of the plight of the homeless. Every attempt to restore order was branded "fascism."

Rita's research into internal party documents—later unsealed by the Intelligence Oversight Committee—revealed chilling strategic discussions. One memo from a Democrat Senior Strategist dated August 12, 2025, read:

> "We cannot win at the ballot box; we must delegitimize the box itself. If the people no longer believe in elections, we control the narrative by default."

This Democrat and Media philosophy bore the false stories that President Barker would end elections and make herself Queen for life. Thus, another excuse for protests and violence by the "Left" in the form of a regularly scheduled "No Queens, No Monarchs" day.

These words ruptured common sense and truth. Political revenge ceased to be a reaction and became a creed. Riots were not just tolerated but curated, filmed, and funded. "Freedom Camps" appeared on college lawns, distributing pamphlets equating capitalism with slavery. ANTIFA organizers merged with cartel smugglers, exchanging ideology for firepower. Funding for these activities flowed into the country from foreign interests. ANTIFA, having the least allegiance to the US, received funding through proxy foundations and fake persons listed as personal donations. Hezbollah and Iran targeted funding for the college protestors, and the young anti-capitalist protestors will do anything for a dollar. These funding sources hired organizers to act on their behalf, providing ready-made signs, protective gear, food, and daily wages.

YouTube content creators and independent journalists were more than willing to brave the turmoil and danger in hopes of earning a few dollars from advertisements and subscriber donations; all the while, major media journalists paid millions of dollars, sat back in the protection of their buildings and security, waiting for all those YouTube, Twitter, X, and RUMBLE feeds to populate the internet so that networks could scrape up the best videos for their news broadcasts and their own personal political spin. Content Creators posted thousands of videos showing these organized protests, with ready-made signs, costumes, transportation, tenting, and protest or riot organizers in yellow vests coordinating and encouraging the violent actions on the ground like top-tier football coaches.

Paid to Play

Excellent investigative journalism by a few independent YouTubers gutsy and patient enough to catch a few protestors off guard and ask some very revealing questions. Although it was challenging to get protestors to admit to being paid, a few dozen did acknowledge that they were paid and how much. One organizer in a yellow reflective vest, a young woman with her own YouTube Channel, admitted that she was paid $8,000 per month to speak and organize protests on whatever issue was presented at the time. She helped recruit protestors, paying between $100-$500 per day for them, depending on the duration of the protests and the amount of violence and disruption the client desired. Ironically, some of the paid protestors were illegal immigrants, many more were college students, the unemployed, and members of chat forums for the anti-government participants.

Assassination, a Christian Conservative

Newspaper and TV News Headline: "Right Wing Christian Conservative Johnathon Bennett dead." The article and the media, as always, are reading from the same script:

"Divisive and highly controversial Far Right-Wing Johnathon Bennett died this afternoon. We are still waiting to learn the facts. There are reports that it could have been an exploding microphone, a heart attack, a stroke, or it is possible that he was shot by someone close up in the crowd."

Of course, more facts were known at the time, but the media just wanted to report that he was shot with an assault rifle or a pistol from close range. Once the police put that information out, the media had to acknowledge the rifle wasn't an assault rifle, and yet, once again, they needed to make another false claim to keep this from being a left-wing attack; thus, they followed up with claims that the shooter was a Conservative unhappy with the MAGA idea. The media just wanted to start that narrative and have it spread, just in case it turns out to be a left-leaning person. It's harder to get the truth accepted in public after the false story has already been reported in the news, on the Airwaves, or on the internet.

The facts are that on September 12th, 2025, the assassination in Arkansas of a 31-year-old man, a Conservative Christian leader and public speaker at many of the country's universities, was executed by a Left-wing ideology that believed violence was a legitimate way of resolving differences. He was shot by a young man with a bolt-action hunting rifle from on top of a building 200 yards away. Johnathon Bennett, a highly successful self-made millionaire, enjoyed engaging with anyone aged 18 to 35, particularly college students, about their perceptions of current social-political issues, religion, and their reasons for holding or not holding conservative viewpoints. He's never aggressive, although he can be dismissive, especially when faced with multiple students asking identical questions, each based on the same logical fallacies. In the early days, he faced more opposition to his lectures and logic challenges. However, after President Barker began his MAGA campaign, and more like-minded students discovered they were not alone, Johnathon's crowds grew exponentially, consisting of more fans who challenged him. Sadly, that often makes a person a target for violence, especially when the nation has a growing crack of divisiveness.

It took weeks for the public to accept the truth, and most rejected the original false story. However, some still believe it today, and the Media never apologize or admit to publishing false information. It's just not in their DNA to be honest, truthful, and unbiased. There was a time when that was the case, but it ended about 20-30 years ago.

As for the shooter, giving him attention in print or on TV is what he wanted: attention. So, he won't get it here.

Rita's Journal 1, pages 14-19

March 2026-November 2027

In the spring of 2026, social media and the public began reporting that suspected armed convoys, black vans without license plates, began moving up the West Coast, ferrying weapons to what would later be called Confederate Zones.

In Nashville, Rita saw the same pattern on a smaller scale. Protesters attacked police cruisers on Broadway. Her father, once an Army MP, volunteered with veterans guarding a local hospital. “We did this overseas,” he told her. “Now we have to do it at home.”

Was this the plan the Democratic Party sought for the future?

And, for how long?

A Second Civil War?

Chapter Three: Were these two Democrat Politicians from Illinois the impetus for an Internal War?

Looking back at the earlier pages of Rita's Journal, volume 1, pages 8-12, this is a good point, being consistent with Rita's method of analyzing the major element of history first, and the chronology second; thus, this is the point where we set the stage for the persons, decisions and actions leading to the national help pf the next several years.

> First week of October 2025. The Mayor of Chicago and the Governor of Illinois claim that the Republicans lost the First Civil War, and Republicans want to refight and lose again in a second civil war. The Mayor of Chicago and the Governor of Illinois were clearly ignorant about the First Civil War: The Confederate officers and Confederate States of America (CSA) politicians were predominantly members of the Democrat Party; in fact, most of the Southern
> Many, if not all Democrat and Confederate force leadership were slave owners. More than that, all the founders of the Ku Klux Klan were Democrats. Only the Republicans wanted an end to slavery, and that was the impetus for the Civil War: Democrats wanted to keep slavery, and Republicans tried to end it.
> In the second week of October 2025, an error by the Chicago Mayor and the State Governor led to Democrats being called the Confederates, serving as a reminder of their true past rather than the revisionist history promoted by Chicago's Mayor and echoed by various politically Left groups and individuals. Republicans happily and proudly accepted being called the Unionists.

Calling the Democrats and their anti-American cohorts, "Confederates," became commonplace and apropos since all the anti-America, anti-law Enforcement, Anti-Military, Anti-Government, ANTIFA conspire as confederates of each other under the umbrella of the Democrat Party, the Confederacy of the 21st century. Riots and social turmoil in Illinois, especially in Chicago, overshadow those that occurred in Los Angeles, California, and made the Portland, Oregon, protest look like a schoolyard disagreement. Chicago, the Chicago Mayor, backed by the Illinois Governor, sponsored protests and attacks on ICE, went down in history as the men who poured fuel on an already small spark of a fire that led to a series of assassinations, murders, street wars, and finally the Second American Civil War.

November-December 2025,

ANTIFA and Confederate militias use stolen vehicles to stop and trap ICE and other Law Enforcement Officers in an effort to stop captures and transportation of illegal immigrants.

Armed Confederate militia stop and trap an ICE transport vehicle, forcing agents to release immigrants.

Assassination attempts on ICE agents followed by two actual assassinations. ANTIFA firebombs ICE and Law Enforcement vehicles.

Several attempted assassinations of police officers by ANTIFA and other Confederates. Sadly, four police officers were murdered by these same people.

A young Confederate who strongly believes in all the fake news, anti-Unionist, and pro-Confederate information, plans on assassinating four Unionist Senators, thinking that this would turn the power of the government over to the Confederates. The young Confederate assassinates one US Republican Senator and is caught before he can carry out more killings.

December 2025, Confederates/ANTIFA target civilian conservatives and Unionists/NG and Law Enforcement for murder. During the Christmas Holiday, an Islamic Fundamentalist, a supporter of Iran, targets a Christian Church and kills several church attendees before armed Church members kill him.

Rita's Journal 3. Page 37-43

The Christmas Attacks

December 24, 2026.

In the calm before midnight service, a man entered Saint Joseph's Church in Knoxville carrying a backpack. Security footage showed him sitting in the back pew for nearly twenty minutes before detonating an explosive device, killing himself and eleven parishioners, including three children. He was identified as Yusuf al-Hamid, a naturalized immigrant from Iran and online supporter of Hezbollah United Front, one of several Middle Eastern groups exploiting the unrest.

Within hours, another attack struck a Baptist church in Dallas.

President Barker addressed the nation from the Oval Office; she is visibly shaken:

> "When faith itself is targeted, we are reminded that this may turn into a war, not between parties, but between civilization and chaos."

The words were clipped, resolute. Yet major news outlets ran sidebars questioning whether the attacks were "false flag operations." Social feeds are filled with conspiracy threads blaming the government. Truth itself had become a casualty.

Rita concludes the chapter's segment with a historian's detachment:

> "By the end of 2025, the line dividing politics from war had vanished. Revenge, once a campaign tactic, had become policy. For many, violence no longer felt immoral—it felt earned." [Rita's Journal 1. Page 7]

The Collapse of Trust (Spring 2027)

The new year brought neither peace nor clarity.

2027 opened with coordinated cyberattacks on power grids in Texas, Ohio, and Georgia. Each was traced to servers registered in Venezuela and Iran, but public belief split evenly along partisan lines. Half the population blamed foreign terrorists; the other half insisted the government had staged the outages to justify emergency powers.

Economically, the country fractured. Blue-state governors froze cooperation with federal agencies, claiming autonomy. Red states formed cross-border compacts to share fuel, food, and ammunition. By January 2027, the United States existed more on paper than in practice.

> In 2026, a flood of various groups, all sharing the same objective, staged protests and riots to overthrow the current government, rejecting the democratically elected

President and the representatives and Senators who were chosen by a clear majority of the people.

Anti-America, Anti-Republican, Anti-President Barker, pro-Democrat, pro-Socialist, ANTIFA, Anarchists, Cartels, and Crime Gangs from foreign countries from everywhere coalesce into aggressive forces with the initial objective of disrupting the federal government, opening the borders so that the United States is no longer a unique country but instead is a government-less territory open for the establishment of smaller nation-states.

This was the year US Intelligence services and the Justice Department found evidence that funding for these constant and violent protests and disruptions comes from several sources: anti-America billionaire George Zoro and his family's Open Society Center and the Center for American Progress, Cartels, Crime Gangs, China, Iran, and donations by gullible celebrities and crowdfunding through accounts in GoFundMe using subtle and innocuous titles only known to their followers.

Rita observes, with quiet finality:

"The nation had grown too tired to argue and too armed to retreat. Civility was not merely lost—it was surrendered."

[From Rita's final graduate thesis, Introduction]

Narrative from Rita's Journal:

Over the duration of the war, assassinations on both sides of the war became a daily occurrence. It is expected now.

Unionist supporters, Independents, and Moderate Confederates who voted for the Unionist President are stunned and are initially having a difficult time grasping the reality that the nation is heading into a second civil war. Most of these people eventually stop watching the news because it's easier to ignore what is happening by not watching the news, news videos, or radio broadcasts; at least that is how it was during the first year when the war was undeclared.

Once several homes and neighborhoods of Unionist families are firebombed, the streets are blocked by ANTIFA and ad hoc anti-Unionist groups, the blinders fell from the eyes of all Unionists, and Unionists responded with violence under the legal self-defense clauses in every state's law, as well as that of the Nation.

What these ANTIFA and ad-hoc anti-Unionist protesters and rioters forgot is that more than 50% of Unionists own firearms, and at least five percent are military veterans and veterans of law enforcement; another 40% are well-trained with their firearms or are hunters. It doesn't take long before the first shots ring out within communities, killing a few of these anti-unionists as they attack personal homes and people just trying to drive home and or to work. Between the protests, riots, gangs, gang robberies of stores, and assaults by the growing numbers of Confederates, the police can't keep up with the increase in violence. ANTIFA and pro-Confederate protestors claiming to be anti-guns begin arming themselves with guns stolen from gun dealers or provided by external anti-American sources, like the Cartels and Hezbollah.

Looking back from the Fall of 2024 through the end of 2025, there were two attempted assassinations on the President of the United States, followed by hostilities that only served as the beginning of a series of mounting hostilities that resulted in the murders of 17 conservative unionists, and the death of 5 Leftists-Confederates from ANTIFA and pro-Socialist protestors before the end of the new USA President Stephani J.

Barker's first year in office. Should we not have expected the trouble to accelerate?

Stephani Barker ran on a platform policy that was symbolized by the "Make America Great Again" slogan (better known by the acronym "MAGA"). Her policy prioritizes internal national problems over foreign interests. She wanted the government to stop wasting money on frivolous projects and programs that primarily generated income and profit from government contracts, producing less value than they cost the taxpayers. She wanted to end the flood of illegal immigrants, foreign crime gangs, and force foreign criminals out of the country. This was one of the first and most significant conflicting issues for the Democrats, particularly for their supporters.

These Democrats have a counterintuitive political opinion and desire when it comes to these illegal immigrants: While they complain that there needs to be more jobs and more high-paying jobs for citizens, they also complain that there are not enough immigrants in the country willing to accept lower pay for working on the farms, ranches, hotels, construction and many no to low skilled labor jobs.

Despite internal hostilities in the USA, Barker negotiated peace and an end to war in eight foreign nations within his first nine months in office. Barker won the presidential election with 52% of the popular vote and 65% of the electoral votes. She won the popular vote and all swing states.

President Stephani Barker tried appealing to the public's sense of history as a way of thwarting the false narratives pushed by Democrats and the Major News networks. She tried to remind the public that they were the Republicans, the party of Freedom, the anti-slavery party, "The Union" that won the historic nation's Civil War 174 years prior. Barker addressed the public, noting that many politicians, educators, and young Americans have lost sight of the greatness of the US and its former reputation as "the shining city on the hill." This is why she chose the "MAGA" slogan, which stands for "Make America Great Again."

This explanation helped little. It may have fed the Democrats and anti-American, anti-Capitalist fodder for their hate speeches. MAGA's meaning was being twisted into a White supremacist slogan, even though there is no mention of race in any part of the slogan. Another twist these anti-Republican proponents pushed the notion that MAGA somehow equaled NAZI. For reasons that no one has ever been able to explain, many people among the anti-Republican, anti-American, anti-Capitalist ranks managed to make those connections in their brains as being truths. Just by hanging onto those two beliefs gave many among the anti-Republican, anti-American, anti-Capitalist their justification for committing violence and the murder of a political opponent. And what did the News Media do? They fed and supported that view.

Rita's Journal 5. Page 36

When and why did the Democrat Party find "making America Great Again" as offensive? Why did they recruit and encourage anti-Capitalist warriors? Why did they reject a democratically elected President, Representatives, Senators, then complain that it wasn't Democratic? Why did they think establishing separate enclaves of this new Confederate Country would work, and how would they support and defend their separatist actions when the US government, the Union, owned all the war-fighting resources? When the bullets start to fly and the tanks begin to roll, what do they think the citizens will do? With 52% or more of the country leaning Right and the Right having the highest number of gun owners, military, and law enforcement veterans, do you really think they have the Union surrounded and will take the nation, or have they just made it easier for the Union to defeat all the Confederate separatists?

> "Sir, do you know they've cut us off? We're entirely surrounded." "Those poor bastards," Puller said. "They've got us right where we want 'em. We can shoot in every direction now."

Chapter Four: Quoting Rita: Warning Signs, Observations, and Emotions during the turmoil

Quoting Rita: Major Media and Fake News

> "Now, we Democrats would never do such a thing, that's what Republicans do", Nancy professes while grinning like a Cheshire cat.

My comments about her might seemed to be a mix of amusement and admiration towards Nancy, but that is just because she really did seem like the most intelligent person in the Democrats Party at the time, and although her methods help lead to this war, it was, I believe, because she stepped aside too soon leaving lesser intelligent and skilled politicians to run amuck and drive the Democrat bus over the embankment of politics and into a bloody war that left them worse off than they were when they started.

My parents introduced me to an old man, a retired soldier and former Military Intelligence officer. That did not mean much to me at the time until I happened to mention to him what I was working on, and he read a few pages of my book. He smiled at one point as he quickly scanned through what I wrote, but as he looked at the last page where I left off, the part about the Smear Campaign, his face changed to a more serious expression, then disappointment. "Yep," he responded to what he read; then he explained,

> "However, we called it Psychological Operations or Social-Political Engineering. It's the same game, just for a different outcome." We employed this tactic in countries where we aimed to encourage the populace to either support or reject their government or an opposition leader hostile to our country. It's incredible how easy it is to steer an entire population towards your goal by simply using the news media, social media, the spoken word, and the old rumor-mill. You might want to factor that in as you write your book."

As the buildup to the Second Civil War, it is obvious that both outcomes were in play: destroy your opponents' reputation and alter the society and government by influencing what a nation's people believe and what we want them to want.

Many of those fake news stories are created or passed on by the same Confederacy politicians who later repeat them, claiming that they were only repeating what the journalists reported. This is the smear campaign that every politician and member of the intelligence community often uses in foreign countries to overthrow a government. Now, it is being used in this country by the Confederacy Party.

The News Media Journalists and many in the public seem utterly oblivious to how and why the media's news stories often contain inaccuracies. The same former Intelligence officer I previously mentioned told me to remember that with governments and the media, "The Truth Changes as the Wind Blows." "Never expect either to be completely honest or admit mistakes.

News Media, especially local media and social media, flood the airways with inflammatory accusations that law enforcement uses chemical agents against the peaceful public without provocation. In every case of the use of smoke and tear gas, the rioters are attacking law enforcement. Instigators from the Confederacy, often organizers and paid protestors, create these situations.

The Hispanic-Latino community portrays the actions of immigration control as being racist and targeting only brown people, including citizens. In most cases, the illegal immigrants are participating in the protests and riots as well as assaults on law enforcement.

To inform the public about convicted and charged criminals targeted by Immigration Control, the headquarters posts these arrests on social media, including a summary of the convictions and current charges. Sadly, Confederates organizing the protests and riots claim that all the information is fake and the Federal Government, the Union, is targeting people of color. Democrat-Confederates and the news media intentionally stir hate and violence by a daily flood of false information about what is really happening. Most of us know that the news media are only happy when there is bad news, violence, disasters, and crimes to report.

Warning signs were out before the war broke out.

2025: Push to identify and locate illegal immigrants with criminal records and illegal immigrants who have overstayed their visas and have ignored deportation court orders. Democrats immediately encourage anti-Republicans to interfere with and protest wherever Immigration Control is seen, or cities and communities known to have large populations of illegals.

What began as protests and assaults against Immigration Control devolved into anti-Republicans and ANTIFA protests and attacks on all Law Enforcement in nearly every major city with a historically Democrat leaning voter base.

Protest grew more violent in cities where the city mayors and state governors ordered local police, county, and state law enforcement not to assist or answer calls from Immigration Control, federal law enforcement, or National Guard troops operating in their states. This included rejecting calls for help. These city mayors and state governors made it clear to the nation that they considered themselves and their state as sovereign territories and not obligated to comply with American laws.

The first crime-ridden city targeted for increased law enforcement was Washington, DC. They initially resisted the help, but positive outcomes were quickly realized, and DC leadership and the majority of the residents were pleased with the results. And yet, most Democrats in Congress continued to protest and complain.

The President's suppression of crime was not what Democrats wanted; they wanted the crime, the disruptions, and the public's fear to continue. It's what the Democratic Party relies on to keep its voting base loyal. Keep the voters in a state of fear, thereby making them reliant on the government's control and protection.

Crime Targeting, City by City

The highest crime cities began reporting a drop in crime just one year before the 2024 Presidential election, which should have been a good thing. Whistleblowers from these cities reported that these Mayors and Governors were "cooking the books" on recorded crimes.

Every city claiming a significant reduction in crime after experiencing decades of high crime rates required police officers and prosecutors to reduce or drop charges on all possible crimes. Carjackings that did not result in death were downgraded to stolen car charges; violent assaults against a person without multiple witnesses were downgraded to a complaint of "injuries of unknown cause."

Dead people found in the city with bullet and stab wounds, but no obvious evidence of the cause or person that caused the death, well, those were all listed as deceased person found, cause of death unknown. This avoids having to record any of these crimes as a violent crime or murder. Thus, we have reduced crime.

Some cities and towns stopped reporting their crime statistics to the FBI due to changes in the reporting process ordered by the Democratic President's administration a year before the 2024 election. The FBI eventually reported that out of the 17,500 law enforcement agencies in the US, only 15,200 submitted their crime reports. This obviously skews the overall findings, making it appear that there is an automatic reduction in crime of 14.2% for the years 2023 and 2024. This makes the crime reduction reported by the Barett Administration and that of Blue States, which did not provide crime data, significantly inaccurate. Sadly, the bell was rung by the Major News Media and, despite the truth about the false crime reports, they continued to use that same flawed data through the next Presidential race and on into the future. Still to this day, they've chosen to cling to the lie. Even the political Left chose to ignore the updated data. It continued to adhere to the false story put out by the media despite attempts by Law Enforcement to correct the record on camera with the press. The real crime numbers, which reflected an increase or no change, became the inconvenient truth for the Barett Administration and the News Media.

Fortunately for the public, after the success in Washington, DC, the President's staff turned their attention to crime in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Louisiana, Chicago, and Memphis. Only Memphis's Democratic leadership chose to accept the help, although, begrudgingly, the mayor and the public also realized a safer community. Chicago, on the other hand, sought out a judge who was politically aligned with the Democrats and filed for an injunction to stop the Federal Government from reducing crime.

Mayors of San Francisco and Los Angeles fought against what they called an invasion from the Federal Government's Nazis. These mayors encouraged the public to come out by the thousands and disrupt law enforcement. Their speeches were filled with calls for acts of violence, and they were echoed and supported by the state's Governor. Of course, when the media questioned these political leaders about their apparent calls for violent revolt, these faces of the Democrat state leadership always answered with, "We said peaceful protest, we don't want any of our citizens being hurt by out-of-control federal law enforcement or untrained National Guard members. The Legacy Media broadcast and regurgitated the same insincere comments made by these Democrats over and over again.

Chicago's Mayor Clancy, a hardened racist, race monger, and the very definition of a narcissist, declared his city a no-go zone to the Federal Government, federal law enforcement agents, and the military. His edict was a useless gesture by law, but it made it clear he truly believed that he was the king of the Kingdom of Chicago.

What made it worse was that Governor J. Lewis of Illinois approved and encouraged this narcissistic behavior.

In 2025, a die-in-the-wool Socialist, Zohan Damdi, ran for Mayor of New York, selling policies as equity for everyone – using the Herbert Hoover political sales trick, "I promise a chicken in every pot," meaning that no matter how poor or rich you are, everyone will have the same thing. The wealthy, however, are often too young and historically ignorant to understand that the successful and wealthy must surrender a large part of their wealth, which will then be redistributed to the poor. Zohan won the election, and the city fell into a nearly unlivable condition. It did not work out for Hoover after he was elected, and it did not work for Zohan Damdi either.

2026, Winter of 2027, the Real Nightmare of New York Begins.

New York City is still a crime haven for cartels, drugs, prostitution of children, and foreign nationals shuttled by the Human Traffickers. Parts of the city look like ghost towns, with many others looking like playgrounds for gangs and gangsters.

Allegations and Conventions of Democrats With Political Power

Several Democrats in elected and appointed legal positions within the states that conducted lawfare actions against the President, both before his election and since he first expressed interest in running for office, have found themselves under investigation and/or in jail. A State prosecutor was charged with a crime she had previously accused the President of committing. A newly elected representative for a community of immigrants and several of his associates are being investigated for pilfering several million taxpayer dollars. A Senator divulged government classified secrets to the news media intentionally to try to spin a false narrative targeting the elected Republican President and some of his staff. One domino after another fell, each showing the face of a Democrat who committed a crime or abuse of power to attempt a coup and overthrow the government via the courts and by pushing the public into violent responses against the new administration.

If there wasn't blood already in the water, Democrats were going to make it happen fast. The Democrats of the old 1860s Confederate South made it clear, loud and proud, that those Liberal politicians were going to instigate a Civil War against the same Republican Union just as they did on April 12, 1861. The Ku Klux Klan and other Dixiecrats at the end of that first civil war stated that "The South Will Rise Again." The real irony is that this time, the old Confederacy Democrats managed to recruit millions of descendants of slaves, the current Black population in cities like Chicago, Memphis, Atlanta, and Detroit, to fight for that same pro-slavery party.

Confederate and Unionist

Confederate is an apt term for the Democrats who initiated the Second Civil War. It wasn't just Southern slave owning businessmen and politicians fighting for an independent Confederate States of America as was the case the first time, it is now a confederation of various parties with sometimes differing agendas, and yet, having the common goal of wanting the current federal government and anyone associated with the Republican Party to be out of their way, out of power, separated, removed, scared off, or dead.

Democrats, Socialists, Progressives, Marxists, ANTIFA, Cartels and other crime organizations, foreign nations such as Iran, and anti-American groups headed by George Zoro, were all Confederates to the new Confederate war party.

Anti-Unionists and illegal immigrant criminal gang leaders send out bounty notices targeting the leadership of law enforcement, military leaders, and unionist politicians, pro-unionist Judges, local community leaders, as well as the Nation's President, Vice President, and the Presidential Executive Staff. Money for these bounties and for resourcing and paying protestors comes from outside organizations and nations with an interest in bringing about the end of America.

Anti-Unionist celebrities, actors, and foreign nationals donate to crowdfunding groups that promote themselves as providing medical care, food, housing, and legal aid for the supposed victims of aggression by the unionists; however, 85% of every dollar is collected by criminal organizations intent on funding their war to topple the government and splinter the nation into several pieces giving criminal gangs and foreign enemy nations the opportunity to takeover one or more of the splintered states at the end of the war.

Rita's Quote: End of National Identity

It began with words, shouts, and false narratives spun every day in the mainstream news and on many popular social media platforms, including YouTube, X, Snapchat, and others. The Democrats (later and often referred to as Confederacy or Confederate Democrats for reasons previously mentioned) and their supporters are only joined by their common hatred of the Republicans (they too will be referred to differently, heartening back to the First Civil War; it only seems appropriate given the larger political picture), or the "Union" and Unionists; however, their desired outcomes for a war are obviously different. Democrats, especially the Progressives, Socialists, and Marxist Democrats, want to overthrow the elected Republican led government without a new election or without waiting for the next legitimate election, and the anti-American supporters, like ANTIFA, want an end to formal government, law enforcement, and the military. ANTIFA, a grand irony, a clear example of an oxymoron, a fascist styled anti-fascist group that Democrats, for many years, claimed does not exist, and is only an "idea."

Although ANTIFA claims to be a movement, even the dictionary refers to it as such, despite evidence to the contrary, it was created as a real organization, not just one, but many independent violent far-left leviathans. They claim to be fighting fascism, and anyone considered "Far Right," But that is not true. In fact, they are Anarchists who use fascist tactics to achieve their goals. They will attack anyone, even the political Left, if the Left dares not to fight alongside them or opposes any tactic ANTIFA uses against their perceived enemy.

ANTIFA may have originated in Europe; however, nearly all the US ANTIFA members were born in America, with very few racial minority members --- At least that was the situation until small groups of young illegal immigrants found ANTIFA's ranks a great way to hide and assault law enforcement, the public, and to commit crimes incognito. These angry young people simply hate everyone and everything that represents Capitalism, a government, laws, law enforcement, the military, wealth, and success. Let's just say they have a knack for hating.

Other anti-American supporters wanted an end to designated borders, especially the wall on the nation's southern border. These people bought into the Open Society Organization and the Center for American Progress, both of which were founded, funded, and run by the George Zoro and family. No Borders, No Countries, just a one world government ruled by a committee without an elected President or monarch, unless, of course, it is the Zoro family. Not just for America, but for all nations and their respective identities.

External Forces and an Undemocratic Democrat Party

The external forces trying to topple America believe that by bringing America down and splintering into smaller nation-states, it can also be done around the world, making it easier to force many smaller dependent country states under the control of a world government than trying to move larger, more powerful nations into submitting or surrendering to an all-powerful world government. The US is the Big Dog; if you can break and tame it, the little dogs will follow or run.

Another interesting contradiction is the irony of the Confederate Democrats calling Union-Republicans "Nazis," considering it is the Left that uses ANTIFA as its version of the Nazi party's Sturmabteilung, the Brown Shirt Storm Troopers, functioning independently with the goal of Divide and conquer.

Rita's Journal 8. Pages 3-15

A Lopsided War from the Start

This was a war fought by the declared Confederacy with its anti-government ANTIFA, Anti-Christian fanatics, Jihadists, easily misled and confused college students, and former soldiers who were emotionally tied through their parents and grandparents to the Confederacy, and or by retired soldiers who fought for profit. The only significant difference between this second civil war and the first civil war is that during the first civil war, the Confederacy fought to keep their Black slaves; now, they fight to enslave everyone.

The Unionists, having the bulk of the war fighting resources and numbers of warfighters and the majority of citizen support; adding ad hoc militia groups made up primarily of veterans still of all ages, loyal soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guardsmen, and skilled outdoorsmen and women supporting the Unionists by protecting their local communities and utility facilities of power, water, stores, banks. The Unionists found themselves, just as in the first civil war, fighting a war against their own citizens and trying not to destroy their own future.

For the next two years, military patrols operating with law enforcement will regularly walk through neighborhoods and cities. Before the war, this activity was protested by the people who would later become the Confederate forces, a practice desired by the public.

The Historian's Reflection

Rita closes the chapter with a page torn from her field notebook, found spattered with soot from the Nashville Library fire:

> "They taught us that the first casualty of war is truth.
> But I have learned that truth does not die easily.
> It hides—buried under noise, waiting for patience.
> The louder the guns, the more silence it needs to breathe."

Chapter Five: A Nation Divided, The First Fire (2027–2028)

A Nation in Embers

> Sky News Australia: Things went to hell, fast in the States. The shooting battle began before the Spring thaw had a chance to start. Looks like there's no turning back for a Second Civil War.

Rita opens with a documentary montage: fuel convoys under drone escort, silent highways, talk-radio voices crackling through static. The Union government has declared limited domestic emergency authority after coordinated bombings in Portland and Chicago—two cities that had once been symbols of art and activism.

Temporary outages in electric and internet service have begun as each side of the conflict tries to disrupt the other's capabilities to communicate and to instill fear in the public.

She writes:

> "No city expects to become a battlefield; it happens one curfew at a time."
> Rita's Journal 7. Page 30

Portland: The Week of Smoke

By late March 2027, downtown Portland is divided into colored grids on military maps—red for hot zones, blue for humanitarian corridors. Antigovernment coalitions calling themselves Free Communes occupy municipal buildings, protected by barricades of buses and shipping containers. Local police refuse orders; some join the rebels, others vanish.

Night 1 – Fire engulfs the Justice Center. Drones hover; one feed goes viral: a National Guard medic carrying a child through the ash.

Night 2–3 – Federal troops arrive under General Marcus Hale. He enforces a doctrine of infrastructure first: seize power substations, hold waterworks, ignore everything else.

Night 4–5 – Negotiations collapse. Precision raids cut power to insurgent districts. Without communications, resistance fragments.

Casualties: Civilians 73 KIA (Killed in Action, non-combatants)

US Forces/National Guard: 11 KIA (Killed in Action); 22 WIA, 0 Missing/POW

Insurgents: 420 KIA (Killed in Action), 500+ WIA Estimated Wounded in Action), 54 POWs (Captured, Arrested, Confined)

For the purpose and ease of publication, "Insurgent, Insurgency, Confederates will always be inclusive of all combatant Confederates: Confederate militia, Local and state Law Enforcement that chose to vacate their oath to the US Constitution and fight as members of the Confederacy. ANTIFA, Socialists, anti-Capitalists, socialists, civilians that take up arms against the Union, and professional contracted soldiers hired by Confederate Vice President Tim Watts (using his influence from previous service in the NG, Watts was able to convince 100 veterans, NG members, and reservists to create his own special warfare company with promises of a large payday). Tim missed his first chance to go to war several years ago; now he has another chance, but he chose to hire a proxy Army instead.

Outcome – Portland retaken; phrase "infrastructure first" enters military manuals.

Media Reports

Rita notes that foreign news outlets call the operation The Portland Purge; within the United States, Union broadcasts call it The Portland Relief. Truth depends entirely on which frequency one can still receive.

From Rita's Journal: The first official battle of the second unification of the United States began in Portland, Oregon. Portland, as I remember it, was one of the earliest cities in conflict with the federal government, even when I was much younger. I watched some of the videos from the protests and riots around the Immigration Control facility. Month after month, nightly protests always turned violent, with objects thrown at federal agents, blocking vehicles entering and exiting federal facilities, stopping and harassing innocent, uninvolved civilians just trying to go to work or come home.

Initially, the issue was confined to just one block of the city, the city block containing the jail for illegal immigrants who committed serious crimes. Oregon, and especially Portland, were pro-open borders and, ironically, anti-capitalism politically and socially. However, they all seem to shop a lot and have some of the most expensive habits. The Immigration Control and residents living in that city block request that the city mayor and the state governor require the Portland Police to respond to violence and actions targeting federal facilities. Instead, the city mayor and the state government openly instructed the local police to NOT respond to calls for help or assistance, not even 911 calls for the streets around the Immigration Control building.

To make things worse, these same political leaders instructed local police to arrest any obvious or known

Conservative journalists or journalists who defended themselves while being attacked by protestors and ANTIFA. The Portland Mayor and the Governor openly supported violence against journalists who did not comply with their demands on the media to downplay what was happening on the streets.

Turmoil and disruption of freedom of movement for federal police and the private citizens in that black stretch out farther and wider in the city, over the years 2026 through 2027. Anti-Republican, anti-government, ANTIFA, and people who simply wanted to get away with robberies, assaults on the public and law enforcement, arrived by car and plane throughout the years as if Portland was a theme park for crime. Then came the day when crime escalated to a point where the city Mayor and the Governor of Oregon lost control and authority over Portland. The Governor, a staunch Confederate Democrat, refused to call in the Oregon National Guard to help State, County, and Local Law Enforcement to reestablish law and order in Portland and the surrounding suburbs, all because she believed that it would all end on its own as people got tired of protesting, rioting, robbing, raping, and murdering.

Army and Air National Guard, Forces Meet the Challenge

Rita's Journal Quote: Each month over the years before the first major battle, the number of victims of crime grew exponentially. Portland became a third-world, violent country. The State and City government attempted to hide the actual numbers of victims and types of crimes by using the same methods used by Chicago, Memphis, Washington DC, San Francisco, Oakland and Las Angelos back in 2023 and 2024: police were required to downgrade crime charges and > prosecutors were required to plead down cases to "no charges" or misdemeanors as much as possible. That fraud could only last so long: thousands of Portland residents and those from surrounding suburbs came forward to the national media, as well as internet news services, and told their stories. Oregon's crimewave was no longer a secret; the bell was rung; victims begged the federal government for help. This led up to the Battle of Portland.

Battle of Portland, April-May 2027. It did not begin with a bang or a whimper, but with the sound of hundreds of military vehicles from the National Guard of Idaho, Utah, and Montana. National Guard members from Oregon were designated to protect the State Capitol and primary highways in and out of Portland. Since I wasn't there, and I only have second and third-hand accounts and watched videos of the battle, I will refrain from describing the play-by-play events and actions. What I feel confident in saying after my research is that the Confederates, those rioters, protestors, ANTIFA, anti-government, and quasi-Confederate militias were crushed in five days. By the end of April, the human toll of the battle included the death of 542 Confederate/Insurgents, 739 Confederate/Insurgents/Wounded, and the arrest of over 1,200 Confederate/Insurgents. 14 US/Union/NG Troops KIA, 31 WIA, and One MIA. Some of these deaths, wounds, arrests, and the one MIA NG soldier occurred in skirmishes and accidents after the Battle of Portland.

If anyone had any doubts about the Army and Air National Guard securing the homeland, it ended on the fifth day of the battle. Several things came out of that first battle of the Second Civil War; none were of a particular surprise; they were expected and disheartening:

- The Democrat Party Leaders who made up the New Confederacy began to make themselves known as they pushed for media press coverage and started spinning a narrative of an out-of-control federal government that would not permit states to reject the US Government and become independent State-Nations.
- Charismatic Cartel spokespersons from the three leading crime organizations, two from Mexico and one from Venezuela, made themselves known and offered their support to the New Confederacy in the form of money, weapons, and fighters in exchange for territories that they can occupy inside the US as bases of operations.
- A public relations representative for Hezbollah and Iran offered their assistance to the Confederacy in the form of weapons and fighters. They too wanted land, specifically a city to call home and establish as a base for their operations.
- China's Ministry of State Security representatives offered their assistance to the Confederacy in the form of weapons, intelligence, and training.
- Venezuela's President offered his country's military support to the New Confederacy in the form of weapons and fighters.
- Somalia's offer came with the same caveat as the other foreign offers of support: a city and county for money, weapons, and fighters.
- First, across the country, 15% of the Army and Air National Guard went AWOL, or officers resigned their commissions to join their states' Confederate Militias. However, a few refused to fight for either side.
- Only 5% of Regular military forces personnel left to join as part of their state's Confederate militias.
- Major Legacy News services surprisingly switched their past, obviously political. They understood that if the Confederates won any states or territories and turned them into independent state-countries, there would be no place for those media outlets. Just like flipping a light switch, Legacy Media narrated the news as if it were World War II America, and anyone against the US was the enemy and would be reported as such. This change hurt the Confederacy since, for the past two decades, they were the mainstream News Media's darlings.

- As for Social Media news coverage, it only got worse, if that was possible. Biased reporting became too much for most people to decipher. Thanks to AI video creation software, Anti-Government, anti-unionist propagandists and Confederate Public Information offices created entirely fake battle scenes depicting the inhumane treatment of Confederate prisoners by Unionists, along with battle scenes of the National Guard being annihilated by the Confederate militias and ANTIFA. If we, the public, relied on social media over the past ten years for our news, as our parents and grandparents did before the Second Civil War, we would start to believe that the nation was imploding or that the Confederacy was winning this new Civil War.

The money to hire the shooter came from funding they received from celebrities foolish enough to donate to their crowdfunding. Her final year would be spent in a coma. Celebrities who had previously expressed support for removing the Republican President quickly went silent. Barker would not return to the Oval Office despite the hopes of the Vice President and the rest of her supporters. Disgustingly, Major Media, Late Night Shows, and Daytime Liberal Talk Shows were giddy with joy over the news. They even proposed that a new election be held and ignore the current Vice-President stepping in as the US President for the remaining time of Barker's term.*

Three days after Barker fell into a coma, doctors confirmed that they could not say when or if she would wake from her medical condition. That evening, the Vice President stepped up to fill the role of President and named the Director of National Intelligence as his Vice President.

What the Coming Year, 2028, Brings

From the first year of President Barker's term in office to the end of President Singer's first year, before the conflict was named Second Civil War, 31,834 people died from the internal hostilities. Future anti-government members of the Democrat Confederacy began conducting their own forms of guerrilla warfare against law enforcement and military units deployed to help law enforcement keep the peace.

ANTIFA expanded their anti-government warfare against military bases by infiltrating, breaking into buildings, and setting up explosives to destroy military equipment and kill military troops within the buildings or vehicles. Eventually, ANTIFA and pro-socialist groups began targeting the spouses, children, and parents of law enforcement and the army personnel with physical violence, causing their deaths.

Chicago: The Battle of the Bridges

Spring 2028. Supply shortages and propaganda films radicalize Chicago's south corridor. Organized gangs merge with ideological militias. When the Union closes the interstate rails to prevent weapons smuggling, the city explodes.

Day 1–2 – Coordinated car bombs strike the LaSalle Street bridges. Power dies across the Loop.

Day 3–4 – 7,000 Guardsmen supported by drones reclaim river crossings under constant sniper fire.
Day 5–7 – Street-to-street combat through abandoned towers; fires burn unchecked as Lake Michigan winds feed the flames.

Casualties – Approx. 900 insurgents KIA/WIA, 38 Guardsmen KIA, 1,200 civilians wounded.
Outcome – Federal victory; Chicago rail hub restored; insurgent command structure collapses.

Rita includes fragments from her interview with CW3 Benny Ellis, the helicopter pilot who evacuated the wounded:

> "We used to ferry soldiers from Iraq. Now we're lifting children out of their own neighborhoods. The skyline looked like Fallujah."

VI. The Aftermath

For six months following, both cities remain under provisional administration. Curfews were to routines; ration lines stretch under murals painted with the word "Unity." The Union declares the campaigns a success, but Rita frames them as a grim initiation:

She lists the lessons that military academies later codify:

1. Hold infrastructure before ideology.

2. Control information or information controls you.
3. Every strike filmed becomes policy for the next decade.

Chapter Six: Changing of the Guard (2028 – 2029)

October 2028:

From Rita's Journal: Changing of the Guard*: Brian Singer delivers a speech to Congress, which is broadcast live on-air and streamed to the entire country. In this speech, he provides the nation with an update on Stephani Barker's medical condition and asks for prayers to help her recover. He presents a set of charts that summarize the hostilities that have occurred in chronological order, pointing out that "95% of all these are initiated or executed by the political Left, the Democrats, who are clearly adopting methods and ideology of their Confederate past." All the Democrats stand and shout in anger, accusing the Republican Acting President of being a "racist", "war monger", "wannabe dictator", "Little Hitler." Singer looks at the Democrat side of Congress, scowls, and shakes his head "no," waving his hands up and down, indicating everyone to sit down. The Majority Leader of the House smacked his gavel on the desk, yelling for everyone, "Take your seats." "Decorum, Decorum, Decorum." Marci Gaddot stands, takes the gavel from the Speaker of the House, and slams the gavel several times until it breaks. Some of the representatives are shocked, and a few Democrats giggled.*

President Brian Singer SPEAKS,

"The entire world is watching all of you at this very moment. I suspect many of you may have forgotten that fact. Your faces and your conduct are now known to the world. This is not a governing body of spoiled children; it's a body of the people's duly elected representatives. None of you is supposed to be here for your personal benefit, but you are supposed to be here to represent the majority of the people who elected you. And last I checked, most American voters made their choice, and that is who you represent, not special interest groups and not your personal ambitions." While Republicans nod their heads in agreement, some smiling, all applauding except for the Democrats.

Democrat representatives continue to spew angry comments and names, but not as loudly as they now see their faces close up on the large flat screen Marci had her staff set up in the House before the speech. She gave instructions to the Whitehouse staff to keep the camera on Democrats every time they protest, look angry, or make a face or gesture that could be embarrassing for them as they see themselves on the big screen, knowing that the world sees it too.

"As of today, thousands of people have been killed as a direct result of this political upheaval. Of that number, all but a few hundred are known to be Conservatives or right-leaning Independents and moderate Democrats that just happened to have voted for the Right. Many of the dead were killed by ambush shootings, car bombings, murdered in their homes, shot or knifed at Conservative rallies and religious events, including Easter and the Christmas holidays. Children have been murdered because of their parents' political views. Teachers in Christian-based schools were assassinated as they left school to go home, even while they walked children to the bus or their parents' car. Members of Congress have been murdered in their homes because of their political stance, and in every case other than the few hundred I mentioned were known to be committed by someone from the political left, supporters of the Left, ANTIFA, Lonewolf anti-Christians, anti-Capitalists, pro socialists, and others from that political view."

> Most of the Democrats in the House continue their antics; however, a noticeable number of them are quiet because they know every word said is true. Everyone in the room is watching the big screen more than they are looking at the acting US President, because their egos are on full display now, and no one wants to particularly look like an ass, with a few exceptions of the extremist progressives on the Left.
> One of the Democrats, Representative Martin Luther Palmer, yells out, "What about the 127 you racist republicans murdered?" Palmer from the Black Congressional Caucus, a self-appointed Democrat Party internal organization for Black Democrats Only, within the US Congress that uses the race card and race baiting to keep people from questioning its existence. This racist separatist group has goals and objectives that have nothing to do with representing their districts, States, or the majority of voters, yet occupies its own space within the US Congress.

Singer smiled and said, "Right on time, I knew you'd be the one to speak out first. Well, let's go through that much smaller number, but first, let's get the Black race question out of the way. You obviously haven't paid attention to who was killed by whom. Most of the Black men and women, many young college students, and children at home or in school were Conservatives. And most of these were killed by other young Black men and women in the ranks of ANTIFA and small groups of thugs that have used the turmoil as an excuse to commit home invasions, carjackings, and robbing stores with a mass of fellow thieves.

"Eight of the 127 deaths were caused by ANTIFA amateur self-proclaimed bomb experts who blew themselves and their friend to dust. Most were Leftists and anti-capitalists who thought getting into a gunfight with the National Guard and Law Enforcement would be a good time; thus, the majority of the 127 were, for lack of a better description, self-inflicted deaths."

The room was mostly silent then, but the tension had not lessened. Politicians from both sides of the aisle and all the people in the gallery murmur to each other about what they've heard and where this might all be heading.

Singer, with a serious look, brows jutting forward, eyes steely, continues: "These people, especially young people, are being motivated, encouraged, and in many cases, as was the cases in Chicago, Portland, LA, and Memphis a few years ago, the city Mayors publicly protested against the sitting President, the Congress's majority, Law Enforcement and denied the national election results and what they clear majority of the nation wanted done to protect the public."

"Major News media and National talk shows portrayed the President and everyone representing the majority of voters, as well as the voters themselves, as evil, racists, Fascists, Nazis, and whatever buzzwords they could muster up to foment a clear and wide gap within the nation. Frankly, I don't know who qualifies as more anti-America between the Democrats, the News Media, and Leftist Celebrities. All of you yell for Democracy while rejecting the results of our Democratic election."

"With the exception of Memphis, the other Mayors openly called for the public to disrupt, interfere, block, and frustrate Federal Law Enforcement and the Military in those cities. Chicago's Mayor, Portland's Mayor, and Mayors in Southern California ordered their local police not to answer calls from, aid, or assist under any circumstance the needs of federal law enforcement and the National Guard. If this were the 1860s American Civil War, or World War One or Two, and a mayor or Governor acted this way, they would be arrested for treason against the United States. But no, we did not. And now it looks like our country is spiraling towards a Second Civil War."

Faces in the House presented a wide range of expressions, from doubt and headshakes of no and yes, to worried and angry faces, with some looking to the Left and others to the Right.

Singer continues: "Most people watching TV, on their computers, or on their smartphones, have doubts that it is this bad. Most people were asking themselves, can't the federal government just fix it? But those of us who have been watching everything unfold over these years recognize that there are States and members of Congress, along with external influences from special interest groups, including foreign nations, that genuinely want to see the country break out into a civil war."

"It's clear to me, and to most Americans, that the Democrat Party of today is the same Democrat Party it was before 1865, when it did not like the outcome of the election because a Republican was elected, and that Democratic win included an end to slavery in this country. I know that there are a lot of revisionist historians teaching that the Union Republicans were the slave owners and the Confederacy Democrats were the political party of freeing the slaves, but that is plain fiction. Abraham Lincoln was not a Democrat; he was a Republican. I know that this is a shocking piece of news for Berkeley and Harvard students and graduates who were brought up on a menu of Afrocentric revisionist history, but false history is fake history is fiction. Unfortunately, the Mayor of Chicago believed the fictional history, as he publicly stated on air that the President wants a second try at the Civil War and will lose again. The Chicago mayor clearly believed, and maybe still believes, that the Confederacy won the war. That said, it seems proper that we put the names back as they really are and recognize that the Democratic Party is back as the Confederacy, and the Republicans, as the people's majority, are the Union, the United States Government."

The News media described how the House was buzzing with concern. The President is making it abundantly clear that any more aggression against federal law enforcement, military troops, and or republican voters and supporters may be viewed as an act of war against the United States. For the Progressives in Congress and the anti-government followers, ANTIFA, and foreign agents with an interest in forcing a war, this seemed like an invitation. The Leftists still could not grasp the idea that they clearly did not have the numbers and resources to take on the entire country; however, some within the Progressives, ANTIFA, and Cartels south of the border, their sights were not on the US as a whole, they wanted to splinter off segments of the country into their own country-states. Progressives wanted Southern California, Somalis wanted ownership of the region of Minnesota that is currently a haven for their immigrants, Far Left Black groups desire all of Chicago and Memphis, and all of Detroit and the counties in Michigan that are predominantly Muslim, ANTIFA want ownership of Portland, Oregon, and the Cartels wanted a large slice of New York City, parts of Colorado and southern Texas.

> Singer begins to close his first Presidential speech, he states,
> "You can't protest that you want a Democratic outcome and then go to war because you lost. When most electoral representatives vote for a candidate, that majority is a democratic act. When the popular vote mirrors the electoral vote, that is a Democratic certainty. When a candidate wins every swing state and wins an increasing number of counties across the country, that is called a Presidential Mandate. To claim otherwise proves without a doubt that you don't want a Democracy or a Constitutional Republic; you want a socialist-Marxist government where a small select group of people rule over the majority for all time. You want a China, North Korea, Vietnam, former USSR styled government."

Singer gives a few more closing traditional remarks referencing that we are stronger together than apart; we can resolve our differences if we stick to the nation's traditions and debate in good faith and accept the outcome of votes, whether we like them or not. With a softer tone, he reminds everyone in Congress and all those watching that, in a democratic process,

> "Not everyone gets what they want all the time, even in this constitutional republic. Still, it's not a reason to fight with each other, and it's less of a reason to kill each other."

The Republicans stand and applaud as tradition calls; the Independents join the Republicans in standing and applauding. Most of the gallery is standing and applauding, with a few exceptions of protestors holding anti-government signs with tape over their mouths to indicate that they are claiming they don't have First Amendment rights of free speech. The generals stand but are careful not to give the appearance that they are taking political sides; however, the smiles on their faces give away their satisfaction with the speech. Most of the Democrats stay seated, showing disrespect for the Acting US President Singer. Several, maybe a dozen or so Democrats, slowly stand to stretch their legs and backs as they look away from the President. Some Democrats still have that worried look on their faces after hearing their party being called the Confederacy of the 1860s, while several more showed angry faces and mouthed words best left out of children's ears.

If only this speech had had the effect that Singer and his staff wanted, future events would have never happened. Before the year was over, the total dead reached 3,592, and more people died because of the same turmoil. Many assassinations and ambushes of law enforcement and members of the military, including ANTIFA infiltrations and attacks on military buildings housing soldiers, aircraft, and vehicles. And direct sniper attacks by ANTIFA members who trained with rifles at their local ranges and by unsuspecting firearms instructors. Not unlike when the 9/11 terrorists took flight lessons from flight schools and then bought flight simulator games to practice, where they were living.

Chapter Seven: California Independence or Takeover

The Coast of Broken Mirrors

Rita begins with a satellite image: the entire Pacific coast glimmering under curfew.

> "From space, the fires looked like constellations rearranging themselves."

By early 2028, the conflict had shifted westward. California, Oregon, and Washington—states long called the Coastal Bloc—announce "temporary autonomy." For six months, freight halts, airports close, and fuel shipments move only under armed escort. Federal authority exists on paper; in practice, every port is its own city-state.

> From Rita's summary of the Year 2028: The Second Civil War Officially Begins
> In May 2028, the National Guard fought Democrat supported Confederate forces consisting of Anti-ICE radicals, anti-government radicals, ANTIFA, anti-Capitalist radicals, and illegal immigrants who formed their own paramilitary groups.
> In June 2018, the National Guard, again, is fighting a Democrat-supported Confederate force consisting of Anti-ICE radicals, anti-government radicals, ANTIFA, anti-Capitalist radicals, MS-13, and TREN DE ARAGUA Criminal Gangs, and illegal immigrants who formed their own paramilitary groups.

Since order of battle and tactics aren't something I can write competently about beyond second-hand and third-hand information, I've intentionally left those out of my journals; However, I might place some loose notes about the battles as information comes my way.

The war continues regardless. Although I'm not a personal witness or experienced in these matters, I am confident that I can contribute details on the battles once more qualified warfare historians advance this study and recording of the history of the Second Civil War.

Wartime Presidential Election: On November 4, 2028. President Singer is re-elected, winning 62 percent of the popular vote and 76 % of the Electoral Vote. The Republican-Unionists win more seats in the House and Senate, giving them a 61% majority in both houses of Congress.

Los Angeles – The Siege of the Ports

January 2028. Cartel syndicates merge with militant collectives to control the Port of Los Angeles and Long Beach. The aim is to deny the Union its Pacific supply line.

Day 1–2 – Explosions at the container terminals; three Coast Guard cutters destroyed.
Day 3–4 – Marine Expeditionary detachments land at dawn, reclaim cranes and fuel depots.
Day 5–6 – Urban fighting along Alameda Street; National Guard engineers cut power to insurgent districts to end sniper overwatch.

Casualties: Insurgents ≈ 200 KIA / 480 WIA; Union forces 14 KIA.
Outcome: Ports restored; Pacific trade corridor reopens.

Rita's field note: "The same cranes that once unloaded cars from Japan now lifted wreckage from the water. Globalization had come full circle." Rita's Journal 3. Page 2

San Francisco – The Battle of the Hills

Within weeks, Northern California erupts. Insurgents occupy civic buildings from Market Street to Twin Peaks. Power and internet outages blanket the Bay Area.

Phase 1: Snipers control the bridges; federal convoys cross only by night.
Phase 2: Marine urban-clearance teams ascend the hills block by block.
Phase 3: Cyber units sever insurgent command servers housed in abandoned data centers.

Casualties: ≈ 600 total; fewer than 10 civilian deaths thanks to precision operations.

Outcome: City secured; communication grids rebuilt within three weeks.

Rita records a quote from a technician repairing a cell tower:

> "We used to connect people; now we just prove they still exist."
> Rita's Journal 2. Page 7

San Mateo and Alameda – Suburban Warfare

Suburbs become the new front. Insurgents seize hostages in tech-campus offices, broadcasting live demands. Federal mediators, aided by Father Abram Lewis, negotiate releases without bloodshed. Night raids later reveal hidden armories beneath parking structures.

Result: 90 tons of contraband captured; network logistics severed; hostages freed.

Rita comments:

> "These were not revolutionary armies but frightened employees with stolen rifles. War had become crowd sourced."
> Rita's Journal 4. Page 25

Oakland – The Five-Day Inferno

July 2028. Oakland's port becomes the hardest fight of the western campaign. Container yards ignite; chemical fires paint the night orange. Federal infantry advances under drone-guided cover; entire blocks shift hands hourly.

Duration: 5 days of continuous combat.

Casualties: ≈ 480 insurgents KIA, 41 Union KIA.

Outcome: Total federal control restored; local citizens aid clean-up crews.

Rita's entry:

> "The people who once marched for climate reform now shoveled toxic ash from their own doorsteps. The irony was merciless."
> Rita's Journal 4. Page 25

The San Diego Accords

Autumn 2028. Exhausted mayors from west-coast cities meet under Marine protection in San Diego. The agreement they sign—later called The San Diego Accords—accepts temporary federal administration of all western ports in exchange for reconstruction funding and amnesty for minor offenders. It is the first negotiated stabilization since the war began.

Rita's verdict:

> "The Accords saved the coastline but not the conscience. Every handshake concealed a scar."
> Rita's Journal 4. Page 27

The Southwest Front (Early 2029)

Insurgents retreat inland through Arizona and New Mexico, merging with cartel routes. Federal forces adapt by targeting logistics rather than ideology—destroying cash houses, tunnels, and data nodes.

Rita describes this as the war's invisible phase:

> "Battles no longer made headlines. They flickered on spreadsheets—tonnage seized, signals jammed, silence achieved."
> Rita's Journal 4. Page 27

Election of President Brian Singer, November 4th, 2028

Inauguration of President Brian Singer, January 20th, 2029

The Historian's Reflection

By the close of 2029, the Union has retaken every major city west of the Rockies. Yet Rita refuses to call it peace:

> "Victory measured in quiet is deceptive. The coast was pacified, not healed. Every port rebuilt its skyline, but none rebuilt trust. The nation still looked in the mirror and saw only smoke."

Expanding Violence, Battles, and Skirmishes in 2028 and 2029:

More Anti-Government and ANTIFA armed themselves with guns, often stolen, and provided by their supporters. Most of these Confederates were not trained soldiers or police, and usually shot wildly, with the occasional friendly fire incident and shooting themselves in the foot or leg literally.

Anti-Government and ANTIFA are using sniper tactics to target Republican leaders, National Guardsmen, ICE, State and Local Law Enforcement, and other Federal Agents.

MS-13, TREN DE ARAGUA, and Cartels conduct kidnappings and public executions just as they did in Mexico, Central, and South America to create fear and submission of local residents as well as instill fear in local police in the towns where these gangs set up their operations.

US citizens that agree with all the violence and lack of protection for their neighborhoods and families, create their own independent militias loosely justified under the Bill of Right 2nd Amendments Militia clause.

Individuals and small, unorganized teams of two to five civilians loyal to the US Government decided to conduct their own offensive actions against targets of opportunity when anti-government rioters, ANTIFA, and crime gangs would gather.

Before the Battle of Seattle, it was widely acknowledged that the second civil war was a possibility, especially for all those citizens who felt the sting of terrorism and combat hell already occurring in their neighborhoods. For the rest of the country, however, it was hard to view it as more than just another instance of violence reported on the news and the contradictory reports on social media.

Despite the US government's efforts to curtail the violence. Even deploying federal troops in high-violence areas seemed to only slow the violence for a few months at a time until military forces and the surge of federal law enforcement were needed in a new high-crime and violence area.

Chapter Eight: The Mandate of Fire (2029–2032)

From Containment to Reconquest

Rita writes that every long war faces the same choice: "hold the line and bleed slowly or move and bleed all at once." In early 2029, President Brian Singer chose the latter. The legal ground was narrow but sufficient—renewed declarations under longstanding insurrection statutes, joint resolutions of Congress, and emergency compacts with governors who had watched their cities torn apart by syndicate money and militias masquerading as movements.

The strategy that emerged from the National Security Council was not romantic. It was logistical, almost municipal: seize ports, bridges, railyards, substations, water intakes, switching nodes—the skeleton that keeps a city alive—then clear inward, block by block, with strict rules of engagement and public-facing evidence teams. Every operation would be filmed by Union cameras and posted alongside declassified radio logs to preempt the propaganda mills.

UNION NEWSWIRE (ARCHIVE) Jan. 27, 2029

"Federal–State Joint Order 11-A: Infrastructure Protection Priority One. Forces will secure electricity, water, and hospital access before any discretionary arrests. Curfew windows shall include humanitarian passage every three hours."

It was not a doctrine of glory. It was a doctrine of enough.

The National Broadcast That Bent the Curve

On the night before the western push, Singer spoke without flourish. Rita transcribes the most-quoted lines from the recovered feed:

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS Jan. 31, 2029

"We will not trade the Republic for revenge. We will not bomb our own future to save our pride. We will keep the water clean, the lights on, and the hospitals open, and then we will come for the men who sold our neighborhoods to foreign money and called it justice."

The line traveled further than any speech since the war began. Even some hostile anchors nodded as he said it. In living rooms where flags had long ago been folded away, viewers whispered, about time.

III. Field Notes from the Reconquest

Rita arranges the campaign like a map laid flat on a kitchen table.

The Western Ports (February–July 2029).

Marines and Guard detachments took the cranes first, then the customs yards, then the network closets that smugglers called "the printers." Two dozen mid-level "civic liaisons"—insurgency spokespeople—were arrested stepping out of black SUVs whose trunk wells held cash and modular rifles. The federal feeds showed their faces next to bank ledgers, not to shame them but to starve the rumor factories.

LOCAL STATION (SAN PEDRO) Feb. 18, 2029

"Power restored to Harbor–Gateway. Free clinics open under Guard security. Curfew remains; humanitarian corridors every four hours."

The Bay Cities (Spring 2029).

Snipers on hills and roofs could not hold once fiber junctions and backhaul relays were seized. Rita notes the sudden quiet that comes when a fight loses its radios: "The loudest war falls silent before it ends."

The Inland Arteries (Summer–Fall 2029).

The Union stopped chasing ideology and hunted logistics: cash houses, tunnels, crypto tumblers, shell charities with names like Hope Harbor and Clean Hands. When the Ari Nguyen networks were cracked, invoices flowed into daylight—payments from the same cartel accounts that had once bribed customs officers. The myth of "people's councils" crumbled by lunchtime.

DECLASSIFIED DHS BULLETIN Aug. 6, 2029

"Nguyen Cluster 4F compromised. Payment rails mapped to TREN DE ARAGUA accounts. Broadcast at 1800 with documentary proof. Expect front-line morale shift within 72 hours."

Within forty-eight, it shifted.

Media: Collapse and Conversion

Rita does not pretend that information alone won battles. But she insists it shortened them. When federal briefers started posting full body-cam reels with time stamps and chain-of-custody affidavits, the outrage clips that once drove the war's narrative began to look like what they were: edits. Ratings for the most militant networks dipped; a few fired their "street correspondents" after donors balked at the cartel revelations.

STREAMING PANEL (TRANSCRIPT) Sept. 2, 2029

HOST: "If the footage is real, we've been carrying water for criminals."

PRODUCER (HOT MIC): “Kill the feed.”

HOST: “Leave it up.”

Some feeds never recovered. Others pivoted to reconstruction coverage, sending cameras to show medics, line crews, and school reopenings. “It was not contrition,” Rita writes, “but it was a beginning.”

Ethics in the Alleyways

Urban warfare corrodes judgment. Rita refuses to varnish it. She documents three wrongful raids, two friendly-fire tragedies, and a disastrous curfew sweep that detained a hospital’s night shift and delayed surgeries. Each incident triggered a court-martial or civil action. Each was publicized by the same government that made the errors. Rita’s verdict is austere: “States prove their legitimacy not by never failing but by being seen to correct themselves.”

On the other side of the ledger, she records insurgent atrocities often hidden by noise: executions of defectors, coerced child couriers, the booby-trapping of food depots that detonated as volunteers opened crates. The moral asymmetry appalled even former sympathizers.

WITNESS STATEMENT — Relief Center, Oakland

“I marched with them. I believed the slogans. Then they wired the rice with blasting caps.”

The Cities That Chose Quiet

By 2030, the Union map showed more gray than red. In Nashville, where Rita lived and wrote, the rhythm of patrol boots slowed. Father Abram Lewis brokered yet another micro-truce—trading hymnals for handshakes in a burned-out sanctuary. Dana Kim expanded her underground hospital network into legitimate clinics and trained a generation of EMTs who had learned triage in parking garages.

In Dearborn, mediation teams and lawful warrants dissolved a foreign-backed network without a Stalingrad. Boston closed its harbor to gunrunners with union longshoremen as partners. Kansas City held its bridges with veterans who had defended them for the first time, wearing reflective vests over old unit hoodies.

COMMUNITY RADIO — Nov. 12, 2030

"If you want to help, bring gloves. If you want to fight, stay home."

The Vote that Joined the War

Rita insists that elections are also campaigns. The landslide of November 2028—which renewed Singer's mandate and expanded congressional majorities—gave juridical muscle to the reconquest. Courts cleared dockets for insurgency cases; states synced emergency statutes; budget votes moved with an efficiency not seen in a generation. The Union learned an old truth of republics: when a supermajority agrees to survive, the mechanics of survival get easier.

Weariness and the Weight of Winning

By 2031–2032, the gunfire had thinned, but the grief had thickened. "Victory fatigue," Rita calls it—the moral exhaustion that follows necessary, ugly work. Weddings resumed with chairs left empty for the fallen. Schools reopened with counselors whose own hands shook as they spoke. Church bells rang for funerals and field hospitals alike.

Rita recounts a conversation with Maj. Tom Lee, the pilot who had once balked at striking American soil:

> "I used to ask if I could live with myself," he tells her, staring at a runway heat mirage. "Now I ask if my kids can live here when I'm gone. That's the only question that keeps the wings level."

November 4th, 2032, Election Day, The Next Commander in Chief is named.

Tonya Patel, the New US President: an Indian American Unionist, is elected during the 2032 presidential election. She's sixty-two years old, a law school graduate and earned a doctorate in Political Science. She served in Congress for eighteen years before being elected as governor of the state of Ohio, a Union state. She served as governor for one term before being elected President in 2032. A Hindu by religion; however, she continues to accept and encourage the public to understand the Christian foundations that helped to build this nation. Tonya Patel is married to retired U.S. Marine Colonel Johnathon Patel, who holds a master's degree in military history and now spends his time as an author of military history and lectures at various universities.

Incoming President Patel is a strong military supporter and believes in peace through strength just her mentor former US President Stefanie Barker. She is especially popular with young Unionist voters. She is also a strong negotiator and deal maker, but not a pushover, and she is not afraid to use military force to maintain the nation's peace and security.

Patel is willing to make concessions with the opposition, but not to the extent of sacrificing and overturning the foundations of the nation she serves.

Handoff to Reconstruction

In the winter of 2032, the administration began what Rita calls "the hard part—the parts list." Not victory parades, but contracts for transformers, water mains, and school roofs; audits of seized cash to fund clinics and courts; retraining waves for police who had forgotten what ordinary days looked like. The country needed fewer speeches and more electricians.

Rita's chronicle closes the chapter with Tonya Patel's emergence—not as a break with Singer but as an evolution. Where Singer had held the line and pushed it outward, Patel promised to stitch it back together—reconciliation without amnesia, leniency without neglect, and a foreign policy that told meddlers their wallets were no longer welcome in American streets.

A New Face in the White House, A New Commander and Chief

January 20th, 2033, the Inauguration of Tonya Patel. The New US President, a Republican, has a 12 in square handmade wooden plaque a local school made for her that says "Protect The Union is to Protect the Nation." It will hang in the oval office for Tonya's next eight years as she also wins in a historic landslide her re-election to the Office of t he Presidency in 2036, taking the country int the year 2040.

By 2033, as cease-fires held, the networks that once inflamed the war tried to rebrand as history channels. Few succeeded. Audiences had grown allergic to certainty.

Rita notes:

"The public began craving primary sources the way a body craves water after fever."

2033, The Islamic Conflict in Florida, Islamic Communities under attack by Fundamentalists.

Historically, the Muslim communities are a mix of traditional or moderate Islamic and progressive Muslims. Hezbollah and Iran demand control of part of Florida as they believe these were promised to them, especially after losing Dearborn, Michigan. With the full US military engaged in these battles, "The Skirmish of Tampa" ended in a single day, and "The Battle of Jacksonville ended after three days, with an additional week to roll up the hostile Confederate fighters from Iran, Hezbollah, and ANTIFA.

Rita wrote: "I did interview a National Guard officer who was there, and this is what he told me:

"In late February 2031, federal cyber teams finally cracked Ari Nguyen's encrypted networks. The revelation stunned both sides: the People's Councils, the name adopted by Progressive-Socialists that consisted of anti-Capitalism and ANTIFA members, had been financed not by grassroots donations, but by TREN DE ARAGUA cartel accounts—the same syndicates that once armed Walker's Chicago."

Rita's Journal 15. page 14-15

Every major news media outlet covered the interview with Cassia Bell, a young woman who spoke for ANTIFA, which went on air. Furious, she shouts, "Lies; We took no cartel money. We are not criminals!"

But the data was real, and its disclosure broke her fragile coalition. The Councils dissolved almost overnight, leaving scattered cells without funding or coordination. ANTIFA and the Anti-Capitalists split as far as their attempt to create an alternative political party.

In Portland, where the insurgency had begun, citizens turned on their former protectors. ANTIFA and DSC flags vanished from windows. For the first time in years, the city's skyline glowed steadily with restored power.

President Singer and Patel visited in secret. Patel stood on a rooftop as engineers switched the last substation online. "This is how peace looks," Patel said beside him. "Quiet, temporary, and half-believed," Singer said. "We'll take it."

Year 2036

Battle of Honolulu: With all the continental states returned under the Federal Government, Hawaii tried to establish its independence from the United States. While the Hawaii National Guard members were split on allegiance, the regular military stationed in Hawaii was not. Active military forces, supported by loyal Unionist National Guard soldiers and airmen, crushed Confederate militias and ANTIFA in less than three days.

Significant damage to civilian government buildings and tourist sites, 831 dead, 2036 wounded, 200 more missing or unknown. Several of the Confederates and Cartel members escaped to the outer islands. The Coast Guard and US Marine Reservists prepared planning and recons to hunt down the belligerents that headed off the main island; however, the US Federal Government ordered a suspension of the hunt. The Hawaii Confederates agreed to the terms of surrender and reunification.

Final Journal Entry from Rita appears below:

Estimated casualties across both sides & civilians by war's end: 12–14 million dead and over 20 million wounded. Just as with the First Civil War, the "Democratic-Socialist Confederacy" was defeated, and millions died for nothing. The Confederacy was a militarized political party that could not accept losing any presidential election. Special interest groups strove to force the majority of the nation to submit to the "Democratic-Socialist Confederacy" with their subtle anti-freedom policies of large government in control of every aspect of life. They wanted a quasi-socialist-communist government made up of a ruling body of only their Confederacy brothers.

Who is organizing and funding these anti-America, anti-Capitalism activities?

Notes from Rita's investigation into the question: "

The "People's Forum:"

1. What the website or organization states: "We are a movement incubator for working class and marginalized communities to build unity across historic lines of division at home and abroad. We are an accessible educational and cultural space that nurtures the next generation of visionaries and organizers who believe that through collective action a new world is possible."
2. What their actions and rhetoric states: Organizes protests and events for anti-Capitalism events and organizations. Promotes Socialist-Marxist-Communist organizations. Operating in New York City. Has excepted request by the Democrat/Confederate Party for assistance in orchestrating and supplying people to protest the Federal Government/Unionists. Orchestrate protests targeting President Stefani Barker. Previously received funding directly from the USAID and from Democrat/Confederates. Paid by clients,' money is funded through the People's Forum, then moved to manpower businesses like "Crowds on Demand" to pay individual hires to protest on behalf of the client. Protest organizers from this organization receive a monthly salary of $5,000 to $8,000. Some of this funding is, ironically, acquired from US taxpayers when it was funneled through USAID and NGOs (Non-Government Organizations, funding approved by Congress and the US Presidential terms of Obam and Barett.)

Rise & Resist:

1. What the website or organization states: "… is a nonviolent direct-action group committed to opposing, disrupting, and defeating any government act that threatens democracy, equality, and our civil liberties.
2. Funding: They claim to be a legitimate tax deduction qualified group for donations, however, no evidence beyond what the website claims exists.
3. Website has several images call for the incarceration and arrests of US Federal Government employees, the President, past Presidents, Vice Presidents, the Military. They state that they hold a weekly vigil for all the Confederate-Democrats "murdered by the Unionist Government." By words and deeds, they are not concerned with protecting Democracy, equality or civil liberties as their mission statement proclaims. By actions and deeds, they are a support network for anti-America, anti-Capitalism, pro-Socialism-Marxism and Communism. Their sponsorship roster lists:
    a. New York City Democratic-Socialists of America
    b. NYCLU, anti-White organization
    c. New York Working Families Party, a neo-Communist movement
    d. New York Communist Change
    e. New York Progressive Action Network, Socialist
    f. Communist Party of USA
    g. Target the Majority
    h. Climate Defenders
    i. Communist Workers of America
    j. Act Up
    k. Freedom Socialist Party. Seems like the definition of an oxymoron.

Action Network appears to be a vehicle or a funnel, a middleman website that makes it possible for anarchist group of other subversive groups to establish their group under a different name that is unknown to the government or law enforcement tracking illegal funds and message traffic calls for any group to organize under the radar of their primary group name.

1. They state clearly that it is "an open platform that empowers individuals and groups to organize for progressive causes. We encourage responsible activism, and do not support using the platform to take unlawful or other improper action. We do not control or endorse the conduct of users and make no representations of any kind about them." That disclaimer statement is consistent with the other middleman or funneling organizations that serve as a form of hiding a group or persons real intent under the Action Network name while the Action Network staff claim ignorance if something goes wrong or gets caught.
2. Their sales pitch for this site "Mobilize communities, raise money, and engage supporters with tools built for teams just like yours." Adding this to what we already know about the purpose of the group, it also sounds like a means for laundering donations or hide the source of funding and who actually ends up with position of the funds raised.

Crowds on Demand: a group that exists explicitly to provide funds for protest organizers. The CEO, Adam Swart (his real name), helps organize and coordinate events. Paid protest organizer from this company publicly admitted on NewsMedia to providing paid protestors for the Democratic Party during the years 2023-2025.*

1. Interview with Protest Manager for Crowds on Demand: "I (Mary) was hired by the CEO 10 years ago. I was out of work before that, and this job sounded like a great opportunity with good pay. The first event I organized was a BLM racism protest in Maryland.
2. NewsMedia asked, "How do you find protest recruits and how much does the job pay?" . Mary answers, "Most of the recruits come from universities and local young people who are unemployed or low-income. We just post a recruiting drive on social media for that school or neighborhood, and we get more recruits than we can handle. Once the word is out, we have some protest recruits who follow us all across the country. These are the people we always select since they know the game and are easy to coordinate and manage.
3. NewsMedia asked: How much does it pay? Mary responds wit ah a smile, "The pay ranges from $100 to $500 per day, depending on the role assigned to the individual and the expected duration of their on-site presence. BLM protests are some of the more expensive protests for us because there are always large numbers of unpaid protesters onsite that are there to bring trouble and violence, putting our staff in danger.

INAUGURAL REMARKS (EXCERPT) January 2033

President Tonya Patel:

> "Reconstruction is not a pardon for those who profited from our pain. It is a promise to the innocent who paid for it."

The Historian's Warning

Rita ends the chapter with a paragraph she rewrote ten times, then left unpolished on purpose:

> "We used fire to stop a fire. That does not make fire a virtue. Nations are not saved by burning brighter than their enemies, but by remembering what the light is for. If this chronicle warns anyone, let it be the ones who still think revenge can be a constitution. It cannot. It never has."

The Second Civil War in Education:

Universities, High Schools, and Junior High Schools begin teaching the "Lessons Learned" from the Second Civil War even though events haven't fully subsided and declared over. This was one of President Patel' first messages to educators: While the war and the last ten years are relatively fresh in our minds, let's not waste time getting the real story of the "What, Who, When, Why, How and the potential future for the nation" in order to avoid having too much time pass resulting in opportunities for Confederate supporters in the News Media, Social Media and Revisionists create a false narrative as the events and losses begin to fade from memory.

Ohio State University offers a new course called Digital Forensics for Historians, Ethics of the Archive, and Verification Under Fire. Former soldiers, journalists, and engineers sat side by side in evening classes. The FBI sends a few agents to this course. Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee offers a course named The Forensics of Terrorism Funding and Resourcing three months after Patel's edict for formal training in schools in the hopes of avoiding a future internal conflict.

Because not all the current fighting and hostilities have ended, yet.

Future Projects by Dr. Rita Talib, the Second Civil War Project, and the Legacy Project

Rita lists many of the battles and when they occur; however, she points out that there are more qualified people to delve into the details of the warfighting tactics and events. She avoids delving into the detailed horror of war. Rita's focus is more on capturing chronology. Her list and dates are telling on their own, showing how far apart many of these battles were and how some of them occurred at the same time, as coordinated battles to possibly split US Forces in hopes of making them less effective. Rita does show us the political complexity and how far one side will allow itself to devolve in pursuit of power.

Chapter Nine: Reconstruction Under Fire (2036–2039)

From the notebooks of historian Rita Talib, Nashville University Archive.

> The Second Civil War recently ended. It was as bloody and vile as the First Civil War. As one of the many YouTube News Content Journalists, I believe it is my responsibility and the responsibility of all the online News Content Journalists to tell the real story of this avoidable war before the internal and external forces that help create this several-year nightmare, publish their own revisionist history to continue their anti-America proxy war.
> Those of us who lived through this nightmare, a war on our own nation's land, are haunted by memories of what we witnessed and experienced for the rest of our lives. Post-Traumatic Stress Syndrome, PTSD, is not a strong enough term for what we live with or the haunting dreams resulting in waking several times every night in a cold sweat.
> This land of ours; this land of opportunity based on our own willingness to work and achieve; this land that has challenges just like any country but allows each of us to learn to handle and overcome those obstacles and challenges; this Constitutional Republic with democratically elected representatives allowing all of us a voice in governance nearly met it's end all because a relatively small groups of unelected people and internal and foreign external special interests protesting against and supported by the biased News Media and the political opposition that lost the elections to a democratically elected President and representatives with policies that matched best with the majority of voters.

This was a war created by the people who demanded democracy while openly rejecting democratic elections.

[Final Draft of Rita's "Introduction" to her graduate thesis on the Second Civil War]

The Silence After the Storm

The war's final shots echoed out across the Gulf in February 2036. No bells rang; no parades marched. The Republic was whole again—but hollowed. Rita writes:

"We thought peace would sound like music. Instead, it sounded like generators starting up after years of dark."

Nashville—once a divided city—became her vantage point for documenting what came next. The streets still smelled of smoke and wet concrete. Graffiti from both sides overlapped on courthouse walls: LIBERTY FOREVER scrawled over NO JUSTICE, NO UNION.

Reconstruction, she reminds her students, is never only about rebuilding buildings. It is about deciding what memory will survive.

The Patel Doctrine: "Peace Through Proof"

President Tonya Patel took her oath in a bunker that still smelled faintly of diesel and sandbags. Her first executive order was not punitive but administrative—Reclamation Order 1A: Restore Utilities, Record Evidence. [As stated previously in this book, Patel wanted the education of young Americans need to happen before the war ended while experienced and lessons are fresh].

Every generator, transformer, and bridge repair had to include an attached ledger documenting who worked, who paid, and who benefited. “If we cannot keep perfect justice,” she told Congress, “we can at least keep perfect records.”

RECONSTRUCTION BRIEF, 2036-04-07

“Federal–Local task forces will rebuild public utilities concurrently with war-crime evidence collection. Transparency to function as both deterrent and disinfectant.”

Patel called it Peace Through Proof—the idea that sunlight, not vengeance, would hold the nation together.

The Ledger Expands

The same Ledger Project that had archived combat footage now tracked reconstruction contracts and refugee assistance. Rita served as a civilian consultant. Her students processed affidavits from field engineers, each page stamped with a new seal: Reunited States Public Works Authority.

CIVIL ENGINEER REPORT – NASHVILLE DISTRICT, 2036-06-12

1. “Power restored to western corridor
2. Total cost: 12.4M credits.
3. Contractor: Local union.
4. No foreign subcontracts.
5. Remarks: morale rising with every bulb lit.”

Cities of the Living and the Dead

Some towns came back easily—others refused. In Portland, the skeletons of half-collapsed towers were converted into vertical gardens. In Chicago, memorial fields bloomed where the old federal plaza had burned. And in Memphis, civic leaders declared that every rebuilt street must bear the name of a medic or teacher lost to the war.

Rita visited each one.

> "They rebuilt as if to apologize to the land itself," she wrote, "each flowerbed a confession."

Law and Mercy

The Reconciliation Courts, inaugurated in 2034, tried the war's architects—not to exact revenge, but to document. Broadcast live, they resembled truth commissions more than tribunals.

Out of 11,000 cases, only 312 ended in imprisonment; the rest in conditional amnesty tied to civic labor.

Viewers called it justice on probation.

COURT TRANSCRIPT — FEDERAL DISTRICT 12 (EXCERPT)

JUDGE: "You admit broadcasting falsified orders?"

DEFENDANT: "Yes, Your Honor. For views."

JUDGE: "Then you will now broadcast the correction—every day for a year."

Father Abram Lewis gave the program its moral spine. His sermons, broadcast every Sunday at 1800 hours, began the same way:

> "You cannot heal what you will not name."

Dana Kim's Revolution of Care

Former paramedic Dana Kim, who had once stitched soldiers in basements, now ran the National Health Corps—a volunteer organization that merged underground triage networks into a public system.

In the first year alone, her clinics treated over 4 million civilians.

A classified memo later declassified in 2040 summarized her impact:

HEALTH CORPS INTERNAL MEMO – 2034-02

"Public trust recovery index correlates directly with clinic density.
Every new outpost reduces unrest incidents by 17% within 30 days."

Rita's commentary:

> "She healed the country by giving it something useful to do: saving itself."

The Foreign Windfall

While Patel rebuilt inward, she looked outward with suspicion. Intelligence reports traced vast caches of Confederate war money to shell companies in Dubai, Caracas, and Singapore. Patel's Economic Restoration Act froze all accounts proven to have laundered cartel or insurgent profits.

Instead of sanctions, she used exposure: she ordered public publication of financial chains, forcing banks to either cooperate or face boycotts. Within months, old sponsors quietly withdrew.

CABLE EXCERPT – STATE DEPARTMENT, 2035-01-14

"External funding streams to hostile actors reduced by 82%. Foreign ministries now court reconstruction contracts instead of insurgencies."

> Rita calls it the first war won by receipts.

The Soldiers and the Streets

Reintegration of troops proved harder. For years, citizens flinched at uniforms. Patel and Defense Secretary Paul Flinn launched the Service Reformation Program: National Guard units patrolled not in armored vehicles but in construction convoys, escorting repair crews and food shipments.

By 2036, half of all Guard missions involved civic work. The uniform began to mean safety again.

DOD – ORDER FOR THE ARMY AND AIR NATIONAL GUARD 2033-02-05

"Effective Immediately, all National Guard Troops will receive training in Military and Civilian Police functions pertaining to Civil Law, Arrest Procedures, Confinement, Traffic Control, etc. and skills needed to prepare all NG members for deputizing as Reserve Civilian Police Officers in the future. The Chief of the National Guard Bureau will provide the Secretary of War with a recommendation or training time required per year, a plan with budget needs to support the same before the October 2033 Federal Budget submission.

> "We do not want to find ourselves in the legal and skill shortfall position again if the NG is needed in a Law Enforcement capacity as well as a Military Force to bare force upon opposition to our nation as a union of States under one government and Flag." President Tonya Patel

FIELD ORDER – NGB HQ, 2035-11-20

"Effective immediately, all urban patrols will include at least one local civilian liaison.

Objective: replace fear with familiarity."

The Return of the Legitimate Journalism

Retired Journalist and media darling, Megan Kelly brought together some of the best of the best reporters, journalists, YouTube reporters, editors, and analysts to breathe life into and establish an independent news service designed to compete or replace all the Legacy Media corporations that helped to foment the fire of the Second Civil War. Named, The Citizen Journal, this new vehicle for information will exist on all the same information platforms as the Legacy Media. Megan met Rita Talib after learning of her journals of the war as it progressed. "Journal, a citizen's journal of the war." "That's what we need a news service that represents the citizens again, with honest analysis and logical conclusions," said Megan to Rita. That, according to interviews with Megan Kelly, became the impetus for the name chosen for this new media service. Thanks to Rita's method of recording events and the relative information of causation and projections, without knowing it, Rita presented the seeds of the new independent news service.

The Citizen Journal became the alternative for all citizens and foreign countries to receive completely unbiased news without a social-political agenda.

Binding The Citizen Journal team was a simple code: every article must cite at least one opposing witness or view; every statement of fact must be accompanied by three independent sources; acknowledge and apologize when false stories, false information, are published or spoken by employees or associates of The Citizen Journal; and we will not to allow ourselves to push a narrative dictated by any politician.

*The Citizen Journal exists for "*We the People." Politicians exist to serve "We the people." Not the other way around.

Initially, The Citizen Journal was self-funded by the participants and was crowded funded by supporters and subscribers until Megan and her staff locked in some long-term advertisers and patrons. It wasn't long before The Citizen Journal was the highest rated news service in the country and all their journalists and reporters, household names.

If US Legacy News Media thought their prewar ratings were bad before, they were about to find themselves struggling to justify their existence as the new replaced the old media. After all, it was only a year into the war when the public and the world finally acknowledged that the Legacy Media had as much to do with creating this national and worldwide nightmare as did the Confederate-Democrats. They profited significantly from the violence, death, and destruction until that media realized their futures relied on the outcome of the war.

Rita wrote its inaugural editorial:

> "Freedom of the press is not the right to shout; it is the duty to listen."

The paper's masthead motto, "Verify, Then Forgive," became shorthand for the new civic ethic.

In 2040, The Citizens Journal became the number one news service in the country. CNN folded and closed its doors in 2039, having ratings below and viewership lower than the local city trash company website. News elements of the networks ABC, CBS, NBC, and Fox went through major restructuring, reducing their national news to the local regional followed by a ten-to-thirty-minute summary news videos following the local news. World news for the networks was limited to a total of sixty minutes in any twelve-hour period. These Legacy networks went back to the basics of providing entertainment shows as they had done successfully before the 1960s.

The Historian's Reflection

Rita closes her notebook on a quiet day in late 2036, the hum of construction outside her office window. The skyline has cranes again instead of drones. Students laugh on campus lawns once used as refugee fields.

She writes:

> “We learned that a republic does not end when its cities burn; it ends when its citizens stop rebuilding together. Reconstruction was our last campaign, and our first act of faith.”

And then, beneath it, in smaller handwriting:

> “Mercy is harder than war. But it is the only victory that stays won.”

Rita’s 2036

Chapter Ten: Propaganda and Silence: The War on Truth (2025–2033)

The First Casualty

Rita opens her lectures on the war with a single sentence projected in white on black:

"Truth did not die; it was crowded out."

She dates the decline not to gunfire but to bandwidth. By late 2025 and 2026, when marches filled every downtown, a dozen unverified feeds for every verified one were already circulating online. AI voice synthesis made any politician say anything. Half of the population stopped trusting the news; the other half trusted nothing else.

The war began, she writes, as a contest of certainty. Weapons would come later.

The once-amusing AI video creations of various politicians, regardless of which side they represented, at first presented a parade of comical and entertaining clips. Soon after, the public, the media, and the politicians, as well as law enforcement, showed little interest in these creations beyond a good-natured laugh. As if a sign that the coast was clear, AI videos created to enrage, inflame and embolden the Confederate Liberals showing fake interviews or broadcasts of the Unionist-Federal government calling for the death of specific leaders in the Confederate-Liberal network, the destruction of neighborhoods, cities, arrests of people of one race or the other, suspension of the US Constitution and the Bill of Rights, and even claimed the the President was going to drop nuclear bombs on Confederate-

Leftist cities and states. Almost every one of these AI clip videos flooding the Major News Media and Social Media feeds originated from internal Confederate Media resources, Iran, and China's Intelligence Services.

If the major media outlets broadcast a video story, or I see it on YouTube and Facebook, it must be true. Right? The human ability to reason and recognize when information you are receiving might be false or lacking is crucial; however, the public often begins to believe everything. When they receive information from multiple perspectives faster than they can process it, people tend to tune out or only believe information that aligns with their initial perspective and beliefs.

The Echo Economies

Every platform, Unionist or Confederate, learned the same lesson: outrage paid better than accuracy. A newly declassified Federal Cyber Command memo summarized it bluntly:

CLASSIFIED//RELEASED (Extract) CYBERCOM/OPS/2027-04

Subject: Information Market Dynamics

"For every verified report that reaches 10k shares, twelve fabricated stories exceed 1M.

Highest propagation: fear + identity cues + visual proof (authenticity optional).

Lowest propagation: corrections, retractions, nuanced context."

When Rita lectures, she points to that line and says,

"The 21st century didn't invent propaganda; it just automated it."

Fabricated Reality

The first confirmed synthetic broadcast appeared in March 2026. A viral clip showed a Union general—composited from two training videos—ordering troops to "purge the cities." It aired for three hours before engineers found the splice. By then, riots had begun in three states.

ARCHIVE LOG – MEDIA FORENSICS UNIT, 2026-03-18

"Metadata mismatch between voice file and visual stream. Voice engine: GenText v3.2 (Believed to be operated from Caracas node). Dissemination vector: FreedomNow@vlog, 2.7M followers."

Within a month, rival channels released counter-deepfakes of Confederate governors admitting to foreign payoffs—also false. Truth became a self-immolating sequence: every exposure required another lie to make it visible.

The Collapse of Consensus

Rita describes 2027 as the Year of Two Realities.

- In the Union feeds, the nation was surviving sabotage.
- In Confederate feeds, the government was erasing dissent.

Neither was completely untrue, but both were total.

When the assassination attempt on President Barker struck, half the networks claimed she staged it. The rest insisted it was divine retribution. Rita remembers watching from a Nashville café as a synthetic anchor smiled through a pre-scripted obituary for a woman still alive in surgery. "The war," she writes, "had found its aesthetic."

Counter-Information Doctrine

Under President Singer, the Union adopted a radical experiment: transparency as a weapon.

Instead of suppressing leaks, his administration declassified selectively, instantly, and completely, posting body-cam reels, drone feeds, and command transcripts. At first, it looked reckless. Then it began to work.

DECLASSIFIED BRIEF — INFO OPS DIVISION, 2029-02-11

"Public saturation approach yields measurable decline in hostile narrative traction.

Trust through overexposure principle confirmed: Citizens discount lies when verifiable data arrives faster than commentary."

Confederate propagandists tried to adapt by flooding feeds with silence: endless reposts, blank squares, and "no comment" banners to drown the new evidence. Thus began what historians now call "The Quiet Offensive," the first campaign where the absence of sound was itself a weapon.

The Archivists of Silence

Rita credits a small civilian group, The Ledger Project, with saving the war's memory. Founded by librarians, engineers, and one retired Army intelligence officer, they built open-source archives to store unedited field data. Each entry included:

- GPS stamps,
- hash-chain verifications,
- cross-platform witness corroborations, and
- independent civilian signatures.

This became the model for what postwar historians use today as the Ground Ledger.

Rita writes:

> "We could not control truth, but we could preserve it—like seeds in a vault during winter."
> Rita's Journal 1. Page 34

The Propaganda Backlash

When Ari 'Ashen' Nguyen's networks were unmasked in 2031 as cartel-financed, the remaining insurgent propaganda collapsed. Viewers didn't rage; they logged off.

Data from the recovered platforms shows a 72% decline in active accounts within two weeks. Digital fatigue had set in. The public wanted quiet more than victory.

NEWSWIRE – UNITED CONSORTIUM FEED, 2031-05-03

"Traffic to militant channels drops below pre-war baselines. Search terms 'how to verify video' and 'truth sources' trend #1 for seven days."

Rita's Method

She devotes five pages of her book to how she and her students reconstructed the timeline:

1. Source Triangulation: at least three independent confirmations, one of which had to be analog (handwritten log, printed dispatch, or audio tape).
2. Metadata Mapping: plotting upload timestamps against known blackout periods.
3. Language Drift Analysis: tracking slang and idioms to verify authenticity.
4. Motive Weighting: judging sources not by loyalty but by what they had to lose.

Her classroom motto: "Never trust the loudest witness."

- Confederate forces.

Chapter Eleven: The Reckoning (2037-2039)

Collected from the National Archive of the Reunited States; compiled and annotated by Rita Talib.

The Return of Law

By spring 2037, the Republic had light in its courthouses again. Electricity had been easy; legitimacy was harder. Rita opens the chapter with a remark from Chief Justice Alonzo Trent at the first post-war session:

"Law does not resurrect itself; it must be invited back." It would take two years to complete the many cases on the docket.

The Restoration Congress passed the National Accountability Act, granting new circuit court's jurisdiction over wartime crimes. No military tribunals, no secrecy—every proceeding recorded, indexed, and released to the public within twenty-four hours. Justice, Patel insisted, would be transparent or it would be nothing.

Patel is quoted as saying, "No matter how angry we feel or how strongly we desire to see the most active and violent members of the Confederacy, we do not have enough prison space to house millions of people. Common sense and accepting lessons from the First Civil War will help us determine what is in the nation's best interest."

The Grand Hearings

The most watched of these were called The Grand Hearings, held in a converted auditorium once used for music festivals. Rows of citizens filled the seats; cameras broadcast in plain light, without commentary.

Selected Case Studies

Case 1:

US Tribunal for Treason Against the US by the Confederate President, Vice President of the Confederacy, and every Confederate Governor.

Suspects

| Suspect Charged | Charge(s) | Verdict & Sentence |
|---|---|---|
| Confederate President | Treason, Sedition | Guilty, 20 Years |
| Confederate Vice President | Treason, Sedition | Guilty, 20 Years |
| Governor of each State | Treason, Sedition, | Guilty, 20 Years |

Case 2: Vice Governors of Each Confederate State.

Charge: Conspiracy to Commit Treason and Sedition against the USA

Verdict: Guilty

Sentence: Plea Deal: 8-Years

Case 3: George Soros, RICO Charges

Case 17: The Data Broker.

A former network executive admits to selling falsified casualty videos to foreign buyers for ad revenue.

Sentence: ten years of civic labor, restitution through a verified-truth fund.

Case 24: The Field Commander.

An insurgent (Confederate/Contracted Militia hired by Tim Watts) Colonel charged with executing prisoners pleads guilty.

Sentence: life imprisonment, testimony required for every future war-law curriculum.

Case 51: The Contractor.

A corporate logistics chief was convicted of diverting relief shipments for profit.

Sentence: asset seizure and public accounting; no prison, only exposure.

Rita notes that applause was banned inside the hall. “Silence,” she writes, “was the only dignity left to the audience.”

The Question of Citizenship

The most complex debates were not about guilt but belonging.

What did it mean to be a citizen after a war that had split citizenship itself?

Legal scholars proposed a Four-Tier Review:

1. Uninvolved civilians — automatic restoration.
2. Coerced participants — rehabilitation through public service.
3. Active conspirators — probationary status pending tribunal.
4. Foreign-funded agents — denaturalization.

Only a few thousand cases fell into the final category, yet they consumed the entire year. Rita's marginal note reads:

> "The state discovered that exile is easier to pronounce than to enforce. Roots, once torn, scatter."
> [Rita's Journal 10. Page 26]

A series of televised hearings followed, titled "Restoration or Removal?" Citizens testified not only for themselves but for neighbors. Forgiveness, oddly enough, became bureaucratic.

Cultural Reckonings

If courts judged actions, the nation's artists and teachers judged memory.

Theatres reopened with plays about silence and complicity.

Museums curated exhibitions of objects that survived the war unbroken … a child's violin, a cracked camera lens, a nurse's armband.

Rita devotes several pages to a school-teacher named Nora Delgado, who brought her students to paint over the slogans on old barricades. They kept one line visible on each wall: the word REMEMBER.

DEL SOL ELEMENTARY JOURNAL – APR 3, 2037

"We paint until the noise is gone. We leave one word so we don't forget why."

Foreign Accounts

Diplomatically, Patel's administration pursued the quieter form of vengeance: audits.

An international commission traced war-era profiteering through offshore exchanges. Instead of trials, Patel offered public restitution accords—nations or corporations could pay into the Reconstruction Fund in exchange for disclosure immunity.

STATE DEPT BRIEF – JUNE 12, 2037

"Six foreign entities accept terms: total recovery = $41.6 billion.

Public disclosure to serve as a deterrent precedent."

Rita writes:

> "The world watched a country punish theft not with bombs but with spreadsheets. That, too, was a kind of strength."

The Historian's Final Thesis

By autumn, the trials slowed. People wanted closure, but closure is not a civic right … it is a psychological luxury.

Rita's concluding entry reads:

"The most dangerous and powerful weapon during that war was information. … The complete truth, all the facts, pure honesty, and freedom of speech without violence were dismissed as triggering, racism, bigotry, fascism, Nazism, verbal violence, transphobia, Islamophobia, ... any adjective or noun that the opposition can use as a shield of protection and counterstrike.

Young people raised on a diet of … it's the other person's fault you did not get what you wanted; it's the different race or political position that kept you from receiving what you think is your right, can be convinced to end a life.

"Justice, at its purest, is a modest attempt to balance the scale of social fairness and not punishment in itself; it is record-keeping of actions with moral intent. Punishment resulting from that justice is a means of retribution and correction for those actions and intent that run counter to a well-functioning society serving the majority of its members. Children living their developmental years without knowing Justice or Punishment, like spoiled youth, … learn that neither exists for them; those concepts are only meant for the opposition to their desires.

A nation remembers correctly or not at all. Therefore, educational systems of a society must teach the unadulterated facts of the past and not use the classroom as a tool for indoctrination by educators with personal ideas and beliefs running counter to the majority in a society.

Our reckoning was never about who we condemned, but about what we agreed never to forget.

Rita's Journal 10. Pages 5-7

She ends the chapter with one last footnote, written in longhand at the bottom of the page:

> "There will always be people in a society who will desire to rewrite history, creating an alternate reality of the past. History, as both a record of the past and an academic discipline, must be protected from revisionist or alternative educators, politicians, and social-political special interest groups who exploit the past to advance agendas that serve only to divide students and society into angry mobs. My job … Our job … is to ensure that we keep the facts and truth of the past, Honest. Never forget the importance of logic and critical thinking in History; this serves as our shield against false narratives proposed by individuals and groups with malicious intent towards a society and its people.

Epilogue: The Quiet Republic

Extracts from the closing lectures of Professor Rita Talib, Department of Contemporary History, Nashville University (Spring 2040).

The Last Lecture

The rebuilt auditorium holds two hundred students, most of whom were born after the war. They take notes on tablets powered by solar panels mounted where snipers once crouched. Rita begins as she always does, … by turning off the projector so only daylight fills the room.

> "When the shouting stops," she tells them, … "you discover whether a country has learned to listen."
> Dr. Rita Talib

The course is called Civic Memory 101, but she says the real subject is humility. The syllabus is a map of their parents' mistakes, written so they never need to repeat the journey.

The Republic at Rest

By 2040, The Ledger Project has become the National Memory Archive, open to every scholar and every child with an ID. It contains ten billion lines of verified data, from battlefield transmissions to grocery receipts … proof that nations can, in fact, remember precisely.

ARCHIVE INDEX ENTRY #1

"Rita Talib Collection: personal notebooks, 2025–2039. Status: complete."

The New Generations

Her students ask whether it could happen again.

Rita answers carefully:

> "Any democracy can fall asleep. Ours knows what the nightmare feels like."

They laugh softly, not from mockery but from recognition. Their world is quieter, but they understand that quiet is not guaranteed. Each must defend it daily—with patience, curiosity, and the refusal to hate quickly.

The Historian's Farewell

On the final page of her memoir, Rita copies a note from her father's wartime journal, written when power first returned to their street:

> "Light came back today. We did not cheer. We just sat still, grateful and afraid to breathe too loud."

She adds her own line beneath it:

> "That is how republics endure—not by thunder, but by the steady hum of people who would rather mend than march."

Closing the Ledger

> When the semester ends, Rita locks her office for the last time. Outside, the rebuilt skyline glows. Somewhere, a bell rings—once—for evening classes beginning in another hall.
> She leaves her key on the desk beside a slip of paper:

To Whoever Teaches Next:

Keep the silence honest. Keep the archive open. And when you teach the war, remember to tell them how it ended—quietly, by choice.

Rita Talib's Analysis Method

Talib's insistence on evidence before emotion changed how history is practiced. Her integration of verified digital archives, cross-referenced oral testimony, and algorithmic forensics founded the modern field we call truth architecture, the study of how memory survives manipulation. It was she who argued that history's first responsibility is not to inspire but to prove.

Today's historians still use her "Four Tests of Veracity":

1. Triangulate the witness.
2. Interrogate the motive.
3. Trace the medium.
4. Record the silence.

Why We Still Read Her

In classrooms from Nairobi to New Columbia, students encounter The Second Civil War not as a national tragedy but as a mirror of human behavior under pressure. Her story reminds them that democracy is not a guarantee of peace—only a framework for arguing without killing each other. When that framework collapses, rebuilding it requires more humility than heroism.

A Republic Remembered

The rebuilt United States of her time did not become perfect; no polity ever does. But the Quiet Republic she described gave the world a model for how a wounded nation can document its way back to sanity.

Each year, on the anniversary of the cease-fire, the National Memory Archive replays a recording from Talib's final lecture. The students rise as her voice fills the hall:

“Keep the silence honest. Keep the archive open.”

That, perhaps, is the best definition of citizenship ever written.

Afterword

When I first read Rita Talib's chronicle as a graduate student, I underlined this sentence:

"We used fire to stop a fire. That does not make fire a virtue."

Half a century later, her words have outlived the ruins she described. The Second Civil War—once dismissed as a "domestic containment conflict"—is now studied as the decisive moral test of modern democracy. What makes Talib's record endure is not its politics but its discipline. She wrote without despair, without self-pity, and without the illusion that her nation was unique in its folly.

Every generation thinks it has learned the lesson; every generation needs to relearn it.

THE REAL WORLD

From the Author

For Readers

It's now nearing the end of 2025, as we watch the nation experience riots pretending to be protests every day and night in Oregon, California, Illinois, and many other states and cities.

Before the last Presidential Election, Democratic Fear Mongers claimed that the Republican President would deploy the military to the streets to control the public and deny them their rights.

The real evil in that protest by Democrats is that they have gone to extremes to ensure the President has no choice but to deploy troops into the cities to re-establish law and order and to protect the innocent public and law enforcement.

The Democratic Party of this decade is anything but Democratic. After losing the 2024 Presidential election from a popular vote perspective, the electoral perspective, as well as all the swing states, Democrat politicians, and the News Media openly reject the outcome of the election. Their refusal to accept the election results and the WILL OF THE MAJORITY makes it more than clear that the Democratic Party desires a socialist Marxist governance by committee.

The Democratic Party is destroying its own future either by ignorance of the impact of its actions or intentionally trying to end the party and replace it with the anti-Democratic system so many Progressives desire.

How and Why I Wrote This Book

I wrote this book from the perspective of a researcher writing a history from a point in the future when the United States falls into a Second Civil War, based on the experiences, notes, journals, and research accumulated by a graduate student who later earns her PhD. This is a “What if” story. That said, the “What if” scenario can be applied at various levels of armed conflict, and the outcomes will still be the same.

You can thank the current Mayor Brandon Johnson of Chicago and the Governor "JB" Pritzker of Illinois for my writing this story. After listening to their nonsense and Johnson’s ridiculous claim that Donald Trump wants a second shot at the Civil War, hoping he would win this time, well, that was a fall from my chair, a funny moment. It sounds like Brandon had a pretty bad education in history.

This book presents a worst-case scenario of where we are headed today. It’s not a reach to expect that within a few weeks or a few months from my writing this book, some or many of these protestors will turn a neighborhood or a city block into a shooting war with real casualties and deaths.

For ANTIFA and the paid protesters, this is a game.

Still, we are already watching attacks on law enforcement by protestors stirred to fight because of misinformation and fake news that the Legacy Media refuses to acknowledge. However, for them (Legacy Media), death and destruction make for good news; thus, they are not motivated to help curb the violence and the, on the edge of knife blade, tension they’ve knowingly helped create.

There is nothing for the political Right to say that can alleviate the tension beyond simply resigning from their elected positions and surrendering to the Democrat Party, a Party that clearly rejects the 2024 election and the "Will of the Majority of the People."

Suppose you believe this war scenario is impossible or that the potential of a significant street battle is unlikely to occur. In that case, you haven't been paying attention to what is happening in Portland, Chicago, Oakland, New York City, and several more hotspots. We've already seen attempted assassinations and an actual assassination from persons who were motivated by the fake news stories and portrayals of one side versus another.

Protest Profiteering

Yes, most politically motivated protests we see today and will see in the future, unless Congress and/or State Governments find a way to stop "protests for profit" events from occurring, are for-profit operations as well as being social-political engineering or old-school psychological operations.

The First Amendment's clause of Freedom of the Press, now codified as Freedom of Speech, does not mean – nor was it meant to mean, "I hire a bunch of morons to scream and shout for me so that I can do something else while making it appear that there are more people on my side than yours." This has nothing to do with honest legitimate protests – it's theater, actors, pretenders. It makes a joke out of our entire Democratic voting and debating system. It adds evidence to prove the entire point that the founders and the Greeks had against Democracy. Idiots hiring even bigger idiots to represent them in the bigger discussion of governance.

What does it tell you when a political party, special interest group, or social-political movement group relies on paid participants to make their point? In that case, it is likely to indicate that they either lack a relevant point or that their goals and objectives contradict most of society. Then again, there is also the possibility that no one wants to hear their point or purpose. I'm not pointing to simply one side versus another. There is no reason to believe that Conservative friendly groups or causes haven't hired protestors to fill the ranks at some point. The fact that the Democrat Party and special interest groups are hanging their very existence and future on the protection and support of the Democrat Party and the offshoot Liberal, Progressive, Socialist, and Marxist groups.

They all rely significantly on orchestrated paid protests and on disseminating alternative information to distract from or replace the facts about their real goals and objectives for this country. It has reached a level of absurdity that it's hard to believe it's real --- But there we go. It's happening today.

Let's take a not-so-subtle example of Leftist Obsurdity

Before the Hamas attack, murder, and imprisonment of Israelis on October 7th, 2023, anti-Israeli propaganda already flowed on campuses. This indicates that the protest organizers in the US already knew that an attack on the Israeli music festival and the Israeli residents was planned and when. This conclusion is indicated by the fact that there were already students and local supporters of Hamas and Palestinians applauding and celebrating the Hamas attack and the murders of civilians. Oddly, the Democrat Party leaders never spoke against what was happening; in fact, there was an ongoing denial. WHY? Even the Liberal media ejected the very video images transmitted by Hamas to the world as being so much Israeli and Conservative propaganda.

Our universities were quickly flooded with protests supporting Hamas and Palestine. Organic activists did not organize these. Nearly all of them were started and organized by foreign actors or students and former students friendly to Islamic extremist efforts in the US to change the mindset of America's youth to a pro-Islam, anti-Christian perspective. Through a little research and photo analysis, you too could have, or might have already, discovered that the same faces are manning the megaphones and leading the marches across all the schools. Persons associated with Hamas and Hezbollah, as well as a few faces of persons known to the FBI and the Intelligence community as anti-American propagandists, were identified relatively quickly. With very few exceptions, nearly all those pro-Hamas, anti-Israel organizers were not students at those schools. Again, Democrats in Congress claimed that the protests were peaceful, and Conservatives faked any video or images of violence. WHY?

$$$ Where did the funding and resources come from to support all the student protests? Why was there a large non-student contingency at the universities participating in the campouts and the building takeovers? Who provided food, tents, and umbrellas?

Taxpayers embarrassingly funded them through USAID funds rerouted through NGOs, which then passed the money on to professional protest organizations. Who insisted on filling the coffers of USAID and still demands that it exist and its coffers be filled today? The Democrat Party. It was never a secret; no one wanted it said out loud, and the Media could not acknowledge it by going against the political party they most represent.

The Legacy Media and Democrat Politicians in Congress are well aware that these are manufactured protests; however, the purposes of these events is to provide TV video clips for anti-conservative news stories, offer video clips to Liberal News YouTube influencers, confuse voters who ignore the inorganic nature of the protests and riots, to disrupt the President's Administration, to cause turmoil in cities and communities having the goal of convincing them that it is the Republican Administration creating the problem.

Who's Organizing and Funding the Events?

Over the Summer and Fall of 2025, several paid protesters and a few professional protest organizers have come forward to acknowledge the professional and inorganic nature of most Democrat Party and/or Liberal-oriented protests over the past several years, particularly those since 2014 and continuing to the present. The protests serve the interests of Legacy News Media and Liberal Social Media content, aiming to influence the public to read and research the facts. So who is who?

The "People's Forum" is a socialist-Marxist organization operating in New York City. This organization has its own wealthy supporters (not always Soros). Money is funneled through the organization for use by protest organizers to hire and pay protesters. Protest organizers from this organization receive a full-time employee salary and benefits. Some of this funding is, ironically, acquired from US taxpayers when it was funneled through USAID and NGOs (Non-Government Organizations, funding approved by Congress and the US Presidential terms of Obama and Biden.

* "People's Forum organizing director, David Chung, allegedly receiving payments from Neville Roy Singham, an American businessman that has been accused of being associated with the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). "

* "In January 2025, The People's Forum was listed as one of several initial endorsers for We Fight Back 2025, a series of demonstrations that took place within Washington D.C and in cities across the United States on January 20, 2025, or Inauguration Day, to protest the swearing-in of president-elect Donald Trump as the 47th President of the United States."

* "Following the October 7, 2023 Hamas terror attacks against the State of Israel, The People's Forum released a statement calling for an end to “US aid to the Zionist occupation.” The People’s Forum organized a protest the next day on October 8, 2023, and via social media encouraged attendees to go “all out for Palestine,” and called for supporters to stand with the people of the Palestinian Territories “who have the right to resist apartheid, occupation & oppression.”

Crowds on Demand: a group that exists explicitly to provide funds for protest organizers. The CEO stated in a news interview that his company helps organize and coordinate events, such as protests where lots of people are needed. The CEO publicly admitted to providing paid protesters for the Democratic Party during the years 2023-2025. [www.newsnationnow.com/politics/compensated-activist-majority-protesters-paid/ ]

The Center for American Progress (CAP), a suborganization of the Open Society Foundation created and funded by Socialist Billionaire George Soros, an elitist with visions of himself and his family's accession to rule a Socialist styled world empire. In 2023, the foundation, through the Open Society Action Fund, issued a two-year grant of $3 million to the Indivisible organization. The grant was "to support the grantee's social welfare activities," according to the Open Society Foundation's website.

IF you have any doubts as to the connection between the Soros organizations, even Wikipedia could not pass up posting about a key member of the Soros organizations and Bill Clinton, Hillary Clinton, Barack Obama, and Joe Biden.  Wikipedia

"The president and chief executive officer of CAP is Neera Tanden, a Democratic political consultant and former government official. The first president and CEO was John Podesta, who has served as White House Chief of Staff to US President Bill Clinton and as the chairman of the 2016 presidential campaign of Hillary Clinton. Podesta remained with the organization as chairman of the board until he joined the Obama White House staff in December 2013." Wikipedia

The question I've yet to solve is, "Who in the Democrat Party initiates or orders up these paid protests? Given that Chuck Schumer and Nancy Pelosi's political policies diverged significantly from their current professed views, it may be more effective to begin with the newer faces associated with the open-border, anti-capitalism movement within the Democratic Party. Electing officials to Congress from 2018-2020 would be a reasonable place to start.

How much does a professional or part-time protestor get paid?

It depends. Protest organizers from most organizations receive a monthly salary of $5,000 to $8,000. Spokespeople and Social Media Influencers can earn anywhere from $1,000 to $8,000 per month. As in any business, the higher you sit in the organization, the more you get paid. These are Social-Political Engineering Policy businesses.

The pay ranges from $100 to $500 per day, depending on the role assigned to the individual and the expected duration of their on-site presence. BLM protests are among the costliest due to the large number of unpaid protesters onsite, who often bring trouble and violence, thereby endangering staff.

Some of this funding is, ironically, acquired from US taxpayers when it was funneled through USAID and NGOs (Non-Government Organizations, funding approved by Congress and the US Presidential terms of Obama and Biden.

1. Democrats angrily protested when any Conservative claimed that the 2020 election was stolen. But Republicans held NO Protest marches, not one “No Kings Day” did not suspend support for the federal budget and punish the military, law enforcement, TSA and other government paid workers. AND YET, Democrats are doing that very thing despite their insistence during the Biden Presidency that Republicans support the Democratically elected President. Democrats now, reject that same process. WHY?
2. How far are Liberals willing to go to force their WILL on the Majority?
3. How many Americans will or must die or be crippled for life before the Democrat Party is happy?

War is coming if something doesn’t change.

Author's Final Questions for the Readers

How long will you stand silent before the bullets, broken glass, rocks, and fire come your way?

The Democrat Party members of Congress, along with most Mayors and Governors, have made it extremely clear that they reject the 2024 democratically elected President who won the popular vote, the electoral vote, and every swing state. Every survey taken, even by the Liberal Media, proves that the majority of Americans agree with the Republican Party's position of border security and deportation. Before 2016, Bill Clinton, Hillary Clinton, Joe Biden, Chuck Schumer, Nancy Pelosi, ALL called for the very same policies pushed by the Trump administration today. It's all on record. So why are they all now fighting for the exact opposite of what they conducted just a decade ago?

When your opponent has taken and is implementing many of your previous political policies, and your political party has nothing better to offer in opposition to your last policies, what do you do to win back voters? You convince them that what they wanted and what you previously offered did not exist and then pivot your strategy to the easiest commercial sales tactic: offering "free stuff" in exchange for votes. That is what we are facing today.

Were you of voting age when Bill Clinton ran for his first term? Do you remember the Clinton party platform? Are you too young to know? I suggest you review videos and articles from the end of his second term and from his first term campaign. You might want to jot down the primary goals of the Trump platform first and compare the two. This comparison could reveal why Bill Clinton and Donald Trump were close friends back then, and why Trump donated to Bill's presidential campaign.

Roster of Sponsors and Amounts Collected in Support of the "No Kings" Protests.

This chart has made its way around the country. It was posted on several social media sites as a list of the donors and organizations that sponsored and funded the No Kings Protests. The funds were then used to pay for protestors and resources to support the protests as well as permits.
